Our Disgraces
Birkenhead Is Here
Unconvincable
Lindbergh
A Fight for John D.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

WE HAVE an assortment of "national disgraces." One, our high percentage of illiteracy; another, the high efficiency of bootleggers, hi-jackers, organized criminals.

Another is the official usury established by the Federal Reserve as a basis for dealing in American securities.

Our worst disgrace is the fact established by the American Association of Obstetricians, Gynecologists and Abdominal Surgeons, that this nation has the highest maternity death rate in the civilized world.

Of the thousands of mothers dying every year in childbirth 65 per cent are killed by septicemia and toxemia, both preventable.

Many such deaths could be avoided if some department of government was as interested in the safe birth of a child as is the agricultural department in the birth of a new calf or a litter of small pigs.

The Earl of Birkenhead, secretary of state for India, gave up his job in the British government to go into business and is now in the United States.

Lord Birkenhead says the British Labor government is "for state ownership in the abstract and hopelessly unable to take any step in that direction."

Our Government is against state ownership in the abstract, the concrete and the indefinite, and it wouldn't take any step in that direction if it could.

If you meet Lord Birkenhead you will see an able Britisher.

Col. Lindbergh, with his wife, started on a flight to cover a great part of Central and South America.

One of the nation's highest officials bagged Col. Lindbergh to run no more risks, saying that any accident to him would mean "a great blow to the affections of the nation."

Said he afterward, "I produced no effect, for Col. Lindbergh declined at the outset to admit any danger in flying."

Mrs. Lindbergh seems to have adopted Roosevelt's motto, "Deeds, not words." No young woman interests the American public more than she, and since her marriage she has not uttered one word for publication.

Col. R. W. Stewart, formerly head of Standard Oil of Indiana, beaten in a fight with Mr. Rockefeller, is on his way to England.

Perhaps he goes to join the Shell Company in a great British oil merger and anti-Standard Oil fight.

Colonel Stewart will visit Sir Henry Deterding, head of British "Shell," the biggest Rockefeller rival in the world's oil trade.

If the British want action and an American representative who knows the oil business, they show intelligence in selecting Colonel Stewart.

It looks like a real oil fight.

Betting is wrong and apart from that it might be unwise to bet against the Rockefellers. They have never acquired the habit of losing.

Albert Ottinger, able New Yorker, returns from Russia amazed at his discovery that all Russian convicts, except political prisoners, have, every year, two weeks' vacation to visit relatives.

Mr. Ottinger was "startled by Russia's achievements in industrial undertakings."

Perhaps our Government underestimates those Russians.

We did well after we got rid of King George. Russia may be doing as well, having got rid of a czar that made King George look like a brilliant statesman.

Mr. L. F. Loree, who believes in mergers, and big ones, would like to combine 17 railroads with the Delaware & Hudson.

Common sense says the bigger the mergers the better, since the public must pay for all unnecessary overhead, duplicate salaries of freight solicitors, duplicate purchasing departments, waste on uneconomical routing, etc.

If the people haven't brains enough to watch the big mergers they wouldn't have brains enough to watch little roads combining secretly.

Our glorious Constitution, born on September 16, 143 years ago, followed long discussions and many compromises. But it is undoubtedly the world's best constitution.

Some respectable citizens believe that the Constitution doesn't count when it interferes with their desires. That theory goes back to the days of the Stone Age.

PLAN TO ASSERT THE 'RIGHT OF FREE SPEECH'

May Demand an Injunction in Federal Court to Protect "Strange Interlude"

Theater Guild officials were today more than ever determined to present "Strange Interlude" in Boston—even if Uncle Sam should have to be called into the fight as their ally.

A federal court injunction, asserting the constitutional right of the Athens of America to see "Strange Interlude" in spite of Mayor Nichols or any other censors was the newest weapon to which the backers of the banned O'Neill play planned to resort.

Directors and representatives of the guild were in conference today with New York and Boston counsel.

Churchill Pays Peace Tribute to Hearst

By OTHERMAN STEVENS
Universal Service

Los Angeles, Sept. 19—The luncheon given by Louis Mayer, W. R. Hearst and the Los Angeles Examiner to the Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio in Culver City, was possibly the most remarkable affair ever given there.

The guests included men foremost in all lines of effort and in accomplishments throughout the art, in international eminence, in motion pictures, in all great enterprises.

It was a merry affair; the great English statesman, soldier, author; one-time newspaper correspondent; the man whose life has been one continuous drama; the moving events, chatted with everyone like a familiar comrade.

Back of it all was a constant ringing note of world meaning.

Fred Niblo was toastmaster and Governor Young made the first speech.

Mayer spoke of "the two nations bound together by blood, ideals and traditions," saying that "it is possible that the peace of the world can be assured by them."

Mr. Hearst alluded to the possible understanding to promote peace between the United States and England and as far as possible to establish peace throughout the world.

Churchill spoke of the feeling of joy it gave him when entering the studio to see the two flags side by side, which he considered not only a symbol of the association of the two "great peoples," but as "the secret of the future world: there is the peace and safety of the world."

He rejoiced "to hear my friend, Mr. Hearst, who wields such enormous influence, express in such decided and measured terms his con-

Bishop, Monks Killed by "Spirit Soldiers"

Hankow, China, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Franciscan Mission here has been advised that Bishop Trudo Jans and two Franciscan fathers, Bruno and Rupertus, who were killed last week, were victims of "spirit soldiers," members of a fanatical anti-military organization throughout the provinces of Hupeh.

The three victims were Belgians. Bishop Jans had lived in China 22 years. The outrage brought a sharp protest from the French government to the Chinese Nationalist regime.

Suffering from a throat cold, Mayor Nichols was today ordered to bed in his Jamaica Plain home by Dr. Walter R. Mansfield.

It is expected the mayor will be confined to bed for several days, and while the numerous requiring his attention will be taken to his home by his secretaries.

STOCKS SOAR IN WALL ST.

New York, Sept. 19—Soaring prices for industrial and utility stocks on the big board and the curb exchange; a gradual easing up of the money market, with funds in good supply; a flurry in bank stocks, following announcement of the merger of national city and corn exchange banks to form a new $2,300,000,000 banking house; good reports from the country's business and industrial corporations and a rising tide of speculative enthusiasm in New York and important outside financial centers, were the principal features of the financial situation today.

On the Stock Exchange, the forward procession of high-priced utility and specialty stocks was promptly resumed, with little change of leadership. American Tel. and Tel. moved up 6¼ points to 310¼ and American and Foreign Power, in the utility group, plunged through to 100½ for a new gain of 4 points. Commercial Solvents, sensational leader of the "Blue Chips," leaped 106 points to $700 a share, completing a gain of 475 points from the low of the year.

Confidence in the bull market was stimulated by the new advances of many stocks which have been under more or less selling pressure in the last few days. "Big Steels" example was followed by a number of well-known industrial shares in which the short interests has become crowded. At 247½ U. S. Steel was up 2 points for the day and 17 points from Tuesday's low price, a remarkable recovery, helped along by the sudden freight and flight of the bears.

Lane "Dares" Mayor to Demand Scalps of Men in Exchange St. Deal

The spectre of the Exchange st. widening wrangle stalked forth today to add drama to the City Hall battle over the 1930 tax rate.

Atty. Richard J. Lane accused Mayor Nichols of unfairness and animosity in demanding the resignation of Chairman John C. Dowling of the finance commission.

Atty. Lane, who is a finance commission member and former school committee chairman, "dared" the mayor to explain his failure to seek the scalps of those "who, through stupidity or for some other reason, allowed the city to lose nearly a million dollars of the taxpayers' money to award contracts for the Exchange st. widening."

Commissioner Lane expressed himself publicly in an open letter to Mayor Nichols. He referred not only to the Exchange st. matter but also to "other more or less notorious transactions."

He defended Chairman Dowling of the finance commission as having acted in good faith in submitting to the Massachusetts Supreme Court the tax rate question "which has been before the people and the

He said his vessel, en route from Bermuda in ballast, was off New York Friday night when the coast guard cutter 145 came up without lights and without warning fired five shots at the Shawnee.

After the firing, Capt. McLeod said, the cutter hailed him asking the identity of the ship.

Ex-Mayor Threatens to 'Fire' Street Board if Permit Is Granted and He Wins

Former Mayor James M. Curley entered the East Boston "oil farm" license tilt in the City Hall Council chamber today and championed the cause of the protestants.

He intimated that if the present board of street commissioners allowed the petition of oil interests for tanks for 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 gallons to go through, he would have to discharge them all "the first week in January," even though they were appointed by him during his last term of office.

The ex-mayor's remarks were loudly cheered.

Timothy F. Donovan, president of the City Council, presiding at the East Boston citizens in the fight, introduced former Mayor Curley to the 200 protestants who filled the chamber gallery.

Curley then paid tribute to William J. McDonald, president of the Boston Port Development Company, for the real estate promotion work he had done in the past.

$500,000 IN HOMES

"I am surprised, Mr. McDonald, that you continue this hearing when all these East Boston citizens oppose the project," he said.

"Now, these street commissioners are all good men. In fact, I appointed every one of them. They surely don't want to embarrass me so that I would have to remove them all the first week in January.

"More than $500,000 has been invested in two-family houses in East Boston. I have been studying the section for three years.

"There are 80,000 persons living in the section who are not wealthy. If this project were pushed for Park sq. there would be a considerable fuse raised.

"These people have invested their life savings in little homes and they must be protected. Chelsea has storage tanks for almost every oil company in existence. Why not push the proposition over the border?

"Mr. McDonald, we appreciate what you have done for the city of Boston. Why not continue to enjoy the esteem and good will of its citizens?"

JEER AT OIL EXPERTS

"The present administration has three months more to run. If these commissioners are fired and not allowing the permit to go through they may come to my headquarters and not put them to work. Next January 7th hire them back again."

Before the former mayor entered the hearing two fuel and oil experts had addressed the meeting.

Theodore A. Manseleff, instructor in the department of gas and fuel at M. I. T., sent to the hearing at the request of Atty. Lowell A. Mayberry for the petitioners, submitted a barrage of questions fired at him by Congressman John J. Douglass, former Representative Thomas H. Niland and Asst. Dist. Atty. William J. Sullivan, assisted by Alexander Sullivan, former president of the East Boston Betterment Association.

Hoots, jeers, and cries of "put him out" rained on the head of the 27-year-old instructor, who said he had not the slightest personal interest in either one side or the other.

Attorney Mayberry said he had

POPE CONSULTS FASCIST ENVOY

Vatican City, Sept. 19 (AP)—Friction between the Holy See and the Fascist government over the status of members of Catholic lay organizations and the government's attitude toward them is understood to have been the main topic discussed in a two-hour audience that Pope Pius granted today to count De Vecchi, Italian ambassador to the Vatican.

M'MILLAN FINDS REMAINS OF ICE THAT ONCE CAPPED N. ENGLAND

HARVARD MAN GIVES TEETH TO ESKIMOS

Explorer Is Back From Arctic With Tales of Wonders; Teach English There

Nuwagen, Me., Sept. 19 (AP)—Discovery of the ice cap, "Meta Incognita," which now covers an area of 700 miles with a maximum depth of 3000 feet, between Frobisher's bay and Hudson strait, long sought by scientists, was announced today by Lieut.-Comdr. Donald B. MacMillan. He has just returned from a summer's Arctic trip on the schooner Bowdoin.

The ice cap is estimated to have at one time extended over 4,600,000 square miles.

MacMillan said this was believed to be the last of the ice caps of the Pleistocene period, which covered all of New England, except the tip of what is now Mount Washington, to a depth of 5000 feet, over a period of 35,000 years.

He said the ice cap actually consisted of two caps, one of approximately 400 square miles and the other of 300 square miles. Four glaciers were discharging from it into the bay, all flowing north.

The ice cap is "receding," according to MacMillan, thus settling a question long in the minds of scientists, who have been anxious to know whether it was receding or advancing.

Photographs of the ice cap were made by the expedition for comparison with other photographs to be made on next summer's expedition to definitely establish that the ice cap is growing smaller.

Next year the party will "stake" out with rock cairns the outermost edge of the ice cap, so that scientists in future years can determine with accuracy the rate of recession or advancement.

MacMillan reported that there was no serious accident on the trip, which started from Wiscasset in June, and that the ten members of the expedition remained in good health.

The only accident occurred off Cape St. George, Newfoundland, on the return trip, when Kenneth Frederick H. Rawson, Chicago banker, and Frank Henderson were thrown from the surf. A small dory capsized as they were going ashore for supplies.

TEACH ESKIMOS ENGLISH

The party erected a portable schoolhouse at Nain, in northern Labrador, for use of the Moravian missionary, the Rev. Paul Hentsch, on the agreement that his daughter, who is to be the teacher, will instruct the Eskimo children in English.

Next year an American girl will be taken north to attend her.

Dr. Reginald Fernald of the Harvard Dental School provided sets of teeth for a number of the Eskimos to replace some of the 1800 removed last year by dentists. He also made a comparison of the teeth of primitive Eskimos and those who have been affected by contact with civilization.

Dr. Fernald found the primitive Eskimos' teeth showed no decay and had thick enamel, though they took no care of them. They ate practically all frozen meat.

COVERS 5000 MILES

The condition of the teeth of the Eskimos farther south, whose association with civilized people caused them to eat canned meats, bread and other foods previously unknown to their race, was found not so good.

E. Curtis Matthews of Portsmouth, N. H., who was graduated from Bowdoin College while MacMillan was a member of the faculty, came up the coast by boat and anchored off Monhegan Island to meet the Bowdoin, but the schooner passed there at daybreak and missed him.

Upon learning this, after arrival here, the explorer sailed back to join him before proceeding up the Sheepscot River to Wiscasset.

The expedition covered approximately 5000 miles.

Rothstein 'Had Accused McManus'

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—Dist. Atty. Banton today denied politics had anything to do with the murder of Arnold Rothstein and reiterated it was "the outcome of cheating in a stud poker game several weeks before the killing on November 6.

"Rothstein," he said, "and George McManus, now awaiting trial for the murder, in $50,000 ball, were in the game. McManus paid Rothstein $51,000, but Rothstein never paid the $311,000 he lost to the man whom, it is charged, McManus accused Rothstein of cheating, while Rothstein accused McManus and others of having cheated him."

King's Visit to Italy May Seal Romance

It is announced that during his stay in Italy King Albert will have an interview with the royal family and it is expected that the engagement of the Italian prince and Belgian princess will be announced this autumn.

SEES CLASH ON ARMS AS PERIL TO LEAGUE

France, Italy and Japan Stand United Against Land Forces Cut

Geneva, Sept. 19 (AP)—Sharp conflict of opinion flared up in the League of Nations disarmament committee today when the British delegation moved to reopen the question of considering trained army reserves in seeking the basis for general disarmament.

Lord Cecil presented the British proposal and was supported by the German delegation, but encountered quick opposition from the delegations of France, Italy and Japan.

Lord Cecil described the question of disarmament as the cornerstone of the edifice of world peace and insisted that limitation of land forces, both personnel and material, especially material, was the most important part of the disarmament problem.

MAY END LEAGUE

"If the great powers say to the disarmament commission they cannot adopt any plan for limitation of personnel and material—it might be the end of the disarmament cause and the end of the league itself—who can say?" said Lord Cecil, with impressive earnestness.

He praised the work of France for peace, asserting France was chiefly responsible for the existence of the preparatory disarmament commission.

Rene Massigli, young French delegate, presented his government's attitude toward the proposals outlined by Lord Cecil. He contended that it was not desirable to give the preparatory commission instructions while it was engaged in its program for disarmament.

The commission did make progress at its last spring meeting, M. Massigli asserted. The fact that the British government had changed its attitude on the problem of trained army reserves since the spring meeting was not a good reason for reopening the question.

The French on their part, he declared, were anxious to see the preparatory commission reach a successful agreement.

AWAIT U. S. ACCORD

M. Massigli defended the position that the question of trained land reserves had been definitely set aside at the last spring meeting of the preparatory commission.

He pleaded that it was unwise to discuss the subject of military forces while the Anglo-American naval discussions were proceeding.

France, he said, regarded it rather unfair of Great Britain to reopen the trained reserves question after the declaration by Lord Cushendun in the spring agreeing with Hugh R. Gibson, American member, that this must be left for settlement by the continental powers.

He deplored the frequent changes of government in Great Britain should result in a change of policy, and suggested that another British delegation might carry different suggestions.

The debate was adjourned until tomorrow without a vote. It was understood Lord Cecil and his colleagues have only to make Great Britain's change of attitude clear and to leave her hands free to press consideration of the limitation of military forces and stores.

The ultimate defeat of the British resolution is generally forecast.

Commissioner Lanes letter read in part as follows:

"The present Finance Commission as a body had nothing to do with the action in the Supreme Court. I for one, as a member of that commission, believed that as the law did not require the city to use back taxes in fixing the current tax rate, it was a matter entirely for the Legislature and not for the courts if a change was to be made in the policy to be followed.

HOW ABOUT OTHERS?

"It also looks that Mr. Dowling and the other nine individual taxpayers who joined with him in the petition to the Supreme Court were only attempting to have decided a question which has been before the people and the Legislature for a number of years. Different committees of the Legislature in previous years have expressed the opinion that the courts would first be called upon to pass upon the matter.

"If the subject of resigning from office is in order, it might not be amiss to ask Mr. Dowling why, having the power to do so, you have not demanded the resignation of your city real estate expert and other officials holding office under your appointment who through stupidity or for some other reasons allowed the city to lose nearly a million dollars of the taxpayers' money in awarding damages for the Exchange st. widening, not to mention several other more or less notorious transactions."

John F. Moors and Courtenay Guild, two members of the Boston Finance Commission, were closeted today with Governor Allen at the State House.

Mr. Moors denied the visit had any connection with the Nichols-Dowling controversy.

MODIFY TARIFF BILL TO MEET OPPOSITION

Controversial Provisions Are Eliminated to Make Its Passage Easier

Washington, Sept. 19 (AP)—Simultaneously with a conference of Senate Republicans today in an effort to present as united a front as possible on highly debatable sections of the tariff bill, it was learned that the finance committee majority had agreed to eliminate two controversial provisions in the hope of diminishing prospective opposition.

One provision to be stricken out would have changed the old system of equalizing differences in cost of production in determining duties and made "differences in conditions of competition," the formula to be followed.

IN "FLEXIBLE" DISPUTE.

This section, approved by the House and revised by the Finance Committee Republicans to include transportation costs to ports of entry of competitive foreign and domestic articles as a factor in consideration of competitive conditions is involved in the disputed flexible provisions against which Democrats and Republican Independents have announced opposition.

The second provision would have barred from entry into the United States articles manufactured abroad bearing trade marks owned by citizens of this country. It was agreed to restore the House language which would permit importation of such articles with consent of the owner of the trade mark.

START EARLY SESSIONS.

As this action became known the Finance Committee made public a list of an additional 130 names of corporations, about which it desires information from the Treasury as to tax returns.

To speed up action on the bill, Senate Republicans decided today to begin meetings of the Senate, starting Monday, one hour earlier than the usual noon convening time.

New York, Sept. 19 (INS)—A charge that $328,500 a year was being gleaned from Brooklyn milk dealers by the New York Milk Chain Association, an organization headed by Larry Fay, ex-night club manager, was made today by Health Commissioner Shirley Wynne.

Wynne declared the milk dealers pay Fay's organization $900 a day. The district attorney's office questioned seven persons in an effort to sift the truth of Wynne's charges.

Barber Shop Probe Hearing Next Week

A public hearing will be held next Thursday by the State Department of Public Health on the legislative resolve directing an investigation of barber shops with a view to establishing a state board of registry in barbering. The department is particularly anxious to get in touch with anyone who has been infected or believes they have contracted disease in these shops.

When You

Telephone

Three factors account for the remarkable increase in out-of-town telephoning. They are—

SIMPLICITY—whether the call goes one mile or a hundred, you may give the number to your local operator.

The evening period from seven to eight-thirty has been instituted to provide low rates on social calls at the time when you are most likely to find friends at home.

On calls by number at distances above forty miles, the evening rates are about one-quarter less than normal day rates. And traffic records show that a greater percentage of calls can be completed promptly during this period than at any other time in the evening.

Plan your social calls during this seven to eight-thirty period. We are sure you will be pleased with the speed and economy of this service.

coast guard ship Gresham to relieve the 165, Capt. McLeod said. The Gresham remained with the Shawnee until noon Saturday, when another coast guard vessel relieved her. The Shawnee increased her speed from 10 to 12 knots and outdistanced the American patrol craft.

Marine records show that the Shawnee cleared from Bermuda August 5 for St. Pierre.

Ship Without Lights Would Not Stop, Coast Guard Says

Washington, Sept. 19 (AP) — Coast Guard headquarters announced today that a coast guard patrol boat fired on the Canadian motorship Shawnee off Ambrose light, off New York harbor, on the night of Sept. 11 after the vessel failed to stop.

A brief statement by the coast guard said the vessel was running without lights and appeared to be an American craft. There was no name on the stern to identify her, according to the coast guard, but as the vessel proceeded after her officers refused to identify her, the name Shawnee was made out on her bow.

In the chase the Coast Guard boat held the Shawnee in the beam of her searchlight and repeatedly blew whistles for her to stop, according to the statement.

The patrol boat then fired three blank warning shots without halting the Shawnee, and followed with two shells, after which the vessel stopped.

The coast guard announced its records listed the Shawnee as a rum runner which had been watched by the coast guard vessels.

It also said that after the patrol boat had stopped the Canadian motor ship the cutter Gresham trailed her on her way north.

Gen. Butler to Parade Marines in Quantico

Quantico, Va., Sept. 19 (AP)—Assured that he will have his way about prohibition enforcement here, Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler plans to get out his band and lead back the 2000 leathernecks he took away last Saturday to the consternation of local business men.

Appointed commandant of this famous training base three months ago, the veteran "devil dog," who says lack of public co-operation hindered his clean-up of Philadelphia as its borrowed police commissioner, warned Quantico it must choose between the "lawless element" and the Marines.

Three arrests made by federal agents didn't satisfy the general. He marched out, and with him went the men who make up 90 per cent of the customers of the town's business and amusement places.

After a week of council meetings, "calls" on residents careless of conduct and hasty trips to neighboring municipalities to borrow warrant, A. E. McInteer, mayor and railway stationmaster, told the general the last "big bootlegger" had left town.

"What about the little ones?" demanded the general.

"We think they're all gone," the mayor replied.

"Whenever you're sure we'll have a parade. You and I will lead it right into town and I hope the boys buy a lot of extras to make up for our absence."

POPE TO GREET 20,000 MEN of Italy. "Have, therefore, serene confidence and no alarm."

As a preparation today's interview, the pontiff had given an audience to Monsgr. Borgongini Duca, Papal Nuncio to Italy.

It was remarked in Vatican circles that the present situation may postpone the visit of the Italian royal family to the Vatican, a long-waited event expected to seal formally the reconciliation of church and state.

TWO MORE AUDIENCES

It was expected the Pope would again deal with the subject of Catholic associations in audience he will grant Sunday to some 10,000 Italian Catholic workmen. He may also dwell on the matter in an audience to be given 10,000 Italian professional men, all Catholic laymen, on Monday.

Both Mgr. Borgongini Duca, one of the elaborators and signatories of the Lateran treaties, and Count DeVecchi, one of the leaders of the Fascist march on Rome in 1922, are considered the best sources of information the Pope could have regarding the present state of Italy.

The monsignor's wide experience in diplomatic affairs as well as Count DeVecchi's close association with the Fascist leaders are being counted upon to dissipate any misunderstanding concerning the government's attitude and to try to heal the difference.

THEATER GUILD DEFIES MAYOR

preparing a petition to be filed with United States judge.

He petition's principal contention was outlined as a claim that Mayor Nichols, in forbidding "Strange Interlude's" appearance in Boston, unlawfully deprived Hub citizens the right of free speech and public assembly.

All the legal eggs of the Theater Guild's campaign were not in the Federal Court basket, however.

Astute attorneys of two States were today studying the Massachusetts law with a view to establishing the feasibility of staging "Strange Interlude" in Boston as a "private entertainment" open only to Guild members.

MAY SHUT OUT CENSOR

If the lawyers can offer hope that censors can be excluded from strictly Guild theater parties, "Strange Interlude" will come to the Hollis and Mayor Nichols and the police department will not be invited.

Then there was one more prospective loophole in the blue laws which the Guild's officials were industriously hunting today.

They were thinking of running a "dress rehearsal" of the play instead of a regular performance on opening night.

Maybe, if necessary, there'd be even more than one "dress rehearsal" There might be several—or a lot.

The mayor and the city censors would be invited, and, if they saw or hear anything to bring blushes to their official countenances, then there'd be time for them to take steps. Meanwhile, Boston would have its moment, perhaps several sion investigating the working of the auto insurance act.

As principal witness at the opening of the hearings called by the commission, Goodwin urged retention of the compulsory automobile law's general provisions, modified by the creation of a state fund to provide policies to auto owners at cost.

Dropping compulsory insurance altogether is out of the question, the former registrar asserted.

The pedestrians of the Commonwealth would never permit their protection to be withdrawn, he said, and the lawyers of the Legislature would see that the law remained on the books "because they get such a good thing out of it."

Adoption of a "merit" system of compulsory insurance, such as that of Connecticut or New Hampshire, would be inadvisable because measures of that type "lock the stable door after the horse is stolen," Goodwin continued.

ELIMINATE ZONES.

Modification of the present law by eliminating such injustices as the zoning plan would improve it, according to the speaker, but the most evil feature of all, the high cost, would remain.

Goodwin urged the commission to recommend to the legislature that compulsory insurance be retained with a state fund to make it available to the public without "milking" auto owners to pay insurance commissions, profits, and overhead.

Even the present compulsory insurance bill, with all its imperfections and discriminatory features has proved itself successful in accomplishing its principal object, that of assuring injured persons of compensation, he declared.

It has also worked as a safety measure, he contended.

INDULGE IN BY-PLAY

The cross-examination of Mangeindorf, because of his calm mein, provided a bit of humorous by-play.

The youthful instructor said he was "nonsome" when away from oil refineries because he found the odor of petroleum exceedingly pleasant."

Representative William A. A'Hearn of East Boston asked Mangeindorf if Prof. Rogers of M. I. T. held the same views regarding the odor of fuel oil. Mangeindorf only smiled and explained Prof. Rogers was a "practical" man.

Coolidge-Trumbull Wedding Guests Limited to About 100

GRANDMA OF FLORENCE TO ATTEND

She Is 84 and Will Wear the Gown She Wore When Married in 1870

Plainville, Ct., Sept. 19 (AP)—In pictures as well as in words the story of the marriage of Miss Florence Trumbull, daughter of Gov. John H. Trumbull, to John Coolidge, on Monday will be told.

So many requests had come for permission to attend the church service and the reception for the purpose of making pictures that the governor has placed the details of picturization with a personal representative.

Mrs. Trumbull, also, to be relieved of the burden increasingly laid upon her the last few days, has followed the same plan in having arrangements made for making known wedding information.

Mrs. Trumbull had desired that the wedding of her elder daughter might be "a quiet family affair."

Instead, she has found herself in a bewildering inrush of requests for interviews and for information about marriage arrangements.

65 GUESTS AT CHURCH

With the decision of the governor and herself to have whatever publicity is sought looked after by their representatives they are hopeful that the family atmosphere of the wedding will be preserved.

The guests at the church service at 4 p. m. will be about sixty-five in number, of whom many will be members of the immediate families of the bridal couple. The number at the reception on the lawn of the executive home will be somewhat larger, possibly about one hundred, and effort will be made that no uninvited person be present.

State police will assist the town's peace officers in patrolling the streets close to the Governor's home and in handling the traffic, which is expected to be of large proportions.

Former President Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge, parents of the bridegroom, are expected to arrive at Governor Trumbull's home early Monday afternoon and shortly after the bridal party will assemble in readiness to go to the church.

There will be a number of house guests over the week-end, most of them young folks, intimate friends of Miss Trumbull and of Maj. Coolidge.

TWO-WEEKS' HONEYMOON

There has been no inkling of the time the groom-to-be will have his bachelor dinner. However, he expects to work at his desk in New Haven until Saturday noon, when he will drop his pen and begin on a two weeks' vacation, which will end on October 7, leaving his fellow-clerks a bachelor and returning to them a married man.

Miss Trumbull has lifted the tiniest bit the veil of secrecy surrounding the identity of the invited guests. Among them will be her grandmother, Mrs. Richard C. Usher, 86, of Plainville, dressed in the same lavender wedding gown in which she was married, in the same church, 59 years ago.

Fiancee will be the first of Mrs. Usher's 12 grandchildren to wed. The smiling, elderly lady, mother of Mrs. John H. Trumbull, will wear the light lavender silk dress trimmed with lace which she wore in 1870, when she was married to the late Richard Cleveland Usher, for many years town clerk in Plainville. The gown is very full and has a long train.

Mr. and Mrs. Usher celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1920, two years before his death.

It is understood that this is the first instance in which the bride-to-be has yielded and announced the name of any guest outside the very immediate families and the wedding attendants.

PEACOX STEELS HIMSELF FOR GRILLING

Torch Slayer, Who Has Shown Signs of Breaking Down, Reads Bible in Cell

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 19 (INS)—Earle Peacox, was steeling himself today to take the stand and tell his story of why he killed his "madcap" bride of 20, Dorothy Heinzelman Peacox, and burned her body.

The 22-year-old defendant who looks like a high school boy, has been showing signs of breaking down.

He watches every move in court like a hawk and reacts keenly to each new situation.

NO COURT TODAY

He had an opportunity today to get a fresh grip upon himself, for there is no session of court, the trial having been adjourned by Justice Arthur S. Tompkins until tomorrow.

The "torch slayer" spent the day in jail, reading a Bible given him by a Salvation Army officer.

Peacox winced when the district attorney branded him as a deliberate murderer.

His face lighted up with hope when his own lawyer told the jury: "Earle Peacox is the last man in the world who would wilfully kill the woman he loved so devoutly and tried so hard to cherish and protect."

LITTLE TIME FOR MOTHER.

So intent is he in watching the progress of the trial that he has little time to give to his mother, Mrs. Catherine Peacox, who sits just behind him in the prisoner's dock.

When her son is brought into court shackled to a deputy sheriff she leans over and kisses him as he takes his seat. Sometimes he exchanges a few words, but once court is called to order he pays scant attention to her.

Peacox realizes his big ordeal will come when he is cross-examined by Dist. Atty. Frank Coyne. The prosecutor will attack the defense contention that Peacox was a greatly wronged husband and will seek to show he was no angel. One of the "ace" witnesses of the State is Miss Frances Newman, a Broadway dance palace hostess, with whom Peacox kept company while he and his wife were parted.

MARQUIS QUITS DIPLOMACY TO WED HUB GIRL

Miss Jocelyne Bush Will Be Bride in Rome of Italian Nobleman

The present reached back into history and wrote an entry on the pages of chivalry, in the engagement of Miss Jocelyne de Blois Bush, debutante daughter of Mrs. Henry Sturgis Bush of Boston, to the Marquis Fabrizio Catalano Gonzaga of Naples. They are to be married in Rome on October 21.

Rather than lose his American sweetheart, the young Italian nobleman gave up a diplomatic career, it was learned, and is now arranging to enter business.

Miss Bush, who has a sister, Lecretia Goddard Bush, an opera star, and another sister, Polly Bush, actively engaged in the business, is endowed with a romantic nature.

Two years ago she travelled through Europe with her mother and an older sister. In the ancient city of Rome, the young marquis was presented to the American visitors. The couple fell in love at first sight.

GAVE UP HIS CAREER

He was the son of a duke and a graduate of the Italian government college of diplomacy. A secretary in the diplomatic service, he had already launched on a career under the dominant Benito Mussolini.

When Jocelyne Bush visited Italy again in the spring, the ardour of the dashing young nobleman had not faded, nor had she forgotten the marquis in her round of American society visitations.

Their engagement was announced.

Then when the betrothal was suddenly broken off without apparent reason, wise heads were shaken knowingly.

Swift on the announcement was made that the Marquis Fabrizio Catalano Gonzaga had left the diplomatic service of Il Duce and the second heralding of his engagement to his American sweetheart.

OPPOSED BY MUSSOLINI

The wise ones sought to know the true meaning of the move, learned it.

Mussolini, they were told, frowned on marriages between the nobles of his service and foreigners. Divorces often follow such weddings. Il Duce does not approve of divorces.

When a diplomat enter business, he will, in some circles, be no longer considered a gentleman, for gentlemen, in those circles, never work.

NATIONAL CITY IN NEW MERGER

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—Directors of the National City Bank, the largest bank in America, and the Corn Exchange Bank Trust Co., which operates the most extensive branch banking system in the city, have agreed to merge the two institutions.

This consolidation would give the National City more than 100 branches in the metropolitan area. The Corn Exchange system comprises more than 60.

Total resources of the Corn Exchange are approximately $300,000,000, and those of National City exceed $2,000,000,000. National City is closely approached by the Guaranty Trust Company in point of total resources, but this merger would put it well in the lead once more.

National City stock was quoted "over the counter" today at $499 bid, $505 asked, and Corn Exchange, $340 bid, with no offers. Immediately after the merger announcement, Corn Exchange was the $390 bid, $410 asked.

British Girl Workers Prefer Male Bosses

London, Sept. 19 (INS)—Declaring that "we don't even dare to powder our noses when we have a woman supervisor over us," the vast majority of stenographers, "hello girls" and other young women who work in London offices, stores and factories have voted in favor of male chiefs.

London's thousands of girl workers, it appears from a questionnaire conducted by newspapers, simply hate women chiefs and prefer male bosses because men "are not catty and do not nag."

They say that most of the women heads are "more tyrannical than Nero, more slave driving than an old-time plantation overseer and "more touchy than a prima donna."

The cold wave was reported as general throughout the northeastern and east central states.

Enright Says N. Y. Graft $83,000,000

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—Richard E. Enright, former police commissioner, formally accepted the mayoralty nomination of the Square Deal party on a platform of law enforcement. He said he stood with President Hoover on the issue and charged Mayor James J. Walker and Tammany Hall with responsibility for what he termed complete breakdown of law enforcement in this city.

Charging vice and graft have been widespread under the Walker administration, Enright declared graft paid for protection by the 32,000 speakeasies in the city amounted to $83,000,000 a year.

4 INQUIRIES IN MILL FLOGGING

King Mountain, N. C., Sept. 19 (AP)—Four separate investigations of the flogging of Cleo Tesenair of Baltimore, organizer for the National Textile Workers' Union, and the dynamiting of a platform used by union speakers, are under way today.

The flogging was the second within 10 days, three union members having been kidnaped and one of them lashed by a mob last week.

Gov. Gardner sent his executive counselor, N. A. Townsend, here to make an inquiry and also requested L. S. Spurling, solicitor of the district, to make "a diligent search and prosecution" in the flogging and dynamiting here. Sheriff Irvin Mallan of Cleveland county launched an investigation.

Sheriff J. F. Wright of Gaffney, S. C., also began an inquiry into evidence that Tesenair was carried across the state line into South Carolina. Officers admitted there were no definite clues.

Hoover Calls for Fire Prevention

Washington, Sept. 19 (AP)—President Hoover today issued a proclamation recommending the observance of the week of October 6 as fire prevention week.

"The fine interest manifested in fire prevention by public officials, business men's organizations, women's clubs, civic organizations and the press has already borne fruit," the proclamation said. "For two consecutive years fire losses in the United States have been decreased, and there are indications of a further reduction during the present year.

"A further reduction could be effected through the exercise of ordinary care on the part of our citizens."

Wilson, said by police to have an alias of Robert B. MacArthur, was arrested at a hospital under treatment for injuries suffered in a bath. Police say he has two brothers, physicians, in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Glen Head, N. Y., Sept. 19 (AP)—It is the fashion now for girls to make their debuts at Long Island country estates instead of at town houses in the winter.

Checks Involve N. Y. Judge in Bank Crash

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—Discovery of a dozen cancelled checks for $1000 each payable to Judge Francis X. Mancuso, chairman of the defunct City Trust Co., and signed by F. M. Ferrari, late president of the bank, was revealed today.

The checks, dated in 1927 and 1928, were found in a safe deposit box in the Atlantic State Bank, a Brooklyn branch of the City Trust. The box was one of two controlled by George Zinlli, former vice-president of the City Trust, who turned state's evidence in the grand jury investigation of the City Trust.

Dartmouth 'Prexy' in Warning to Students

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 19 (AP)—President Ernest Martin Hopkins opened Dartmouth's 161st academic year with an address today in which he warned the student body the college felt "obligated to restrict college opportunities to undergraduate constituencies which will appreciate their values and make an honest endeavor to utilize them."

"It is likewise from such considerations that college officers are forced to hold due reservation and to remain only mildly impressed by eloquent contentions that colleges exist solely to satisfy the wishes of the undergraduates," he declared.

"Rightly interpreted the argument is sound, but usually it is not rightly interpreted. The perpetuation college will be far more solicitous to provide the man the undergraduate is to become with what he will hold to have been valuable to him than to provide what a nebulous undergraduate sentiment, which periodically vacillates according to eyes, appears to desire at any given time."

Discussing opportunities of the American youth, President Hopkins said:

"Opportunities lie about us so abundantly that the only concern is for the wisdom we may have in selection of these.

"The machine age is freeing life of the necessity for menial toil and giving rapidly increasing leisure and economic resources which, if we so will, may be made available for the spread of culture and the establishment of new standards of satisfaction for human enjoyment."

FREE TRIPS AND INSULL PAYS

Chicago, Sept. 19 (INS)—William Kenny's generosity in giving his barber a trip to England has been equalled by Samuel Insull, Utility magnate.

Because Insull liked his Pullman conductor, he sent him to England twice upon a pleasure trip.

W. T. Sissons, the conductor, said:

"I was born in England and so was Mr. Insull," he said. "I have been on the 20th Century Limited for many years. Mr. Insull made many trips and we often chatted pleasantly.

"I once said that I had not been back to England for 15 years."

"Would you like to go back?" he asked.

"Sure I would,' I told him.

"Well, then go ahead, I'll pay for it.'

"And so I did, and later Mr. Insull told me it was about time I made a second trip."

U. S. Flier Shortage Makes Forced Service

Washington, Sept. 19 (AP)—A shortage of nearly 300 flying officers in the army air corps under the five-year expansion program has caused the war department to issue regulations requiring graduates of the advanced Flying School at Kelly Field, Texas, to remain in service two years.

This drastic departure from the previous practice of permitting graduates either to continue in the military service or enter the commercial field was considered necessary to assure completion of the program, which calls for 1650 regular and 550 reserve officers by June 30, 1932.

Repair Plane in Air in Record Hop

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 19 (AP)—Unless pilots of the monoplane "Buffalo Evening News," nearly 3 days in the air in refueling endurance record, can repair a broken stabilizer wire, Dale Dryer, chief mechanician of the venture, will undertake the job himself today.

As Dryer was about to go aloft, Jack Little and Merle A. Mollroy sent messages that Little, working from inside the fuselage, had repaired the brace wire temporarily. It became known today, however, the makeshift would render flying extremely hazardous in heavy weather.

"Don't worry, we won't quit," was the word sent by the pilots.

Lindbergh Now the "Yes" Man in the "We" Combine

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., Sept. 19 (INS)—Only a short time ago Anne Morrow, when pilled with questions, replied "Augustus will speak for me."

Augustus referred to her betrothed, Charles Augustus Lindbergh.

The couple were again the center of a group of newspapermen prior to their take-off for Washington. A question was called to them, as they walked across the field. Mrs. Lindbergh promptly nodded an affirmative, and then Charles who added his own "yes" —about three seconds later.

LINDY TO CARRY OUT AIR TOUR TO S. AMERICA

Charleston, S. C., Sept. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Charles A. [illegible] spent last night here as guests of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Newton A. McCully of the Charleston Navy Yard, today resumed their flight from Washington to Miami.

Despite the statement from Washington officials of Pan-American Airways that the announced trip of South America had been abandoned, Colonel Lindbergh said his information was there had been no change in the plans and that the trip would be made as originally planned. Mrs. Lindbergh will accompany her husband on the entire trip.

Plans call for the couple to fly from Miami, inaugurating an extension of the Pan-American mail and passenger lines, through the West Indies and down the east coast of South America to Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana. From there the Lindberghs will fly over the north coast through Central America and back to Miami.

BIDDING A TWO-SUITER

Salient Points of Bidding

Auction: The Auction bidding requires no comment.

Contract: Following North's assist of Hearts, South bids three Clubs to show the two-suited character of his hand, whereupon North shows his preference for Hearts by bidding three of that suit. South then bids four for game.

The Play

West leads the Ace of Diamonds and, South's King failing, leads a low Diamond which South trumps. South leads a Club, East wins with the Ace and returns a Diamond. South wins and leads another Club, which West takes with the King. West here attempts to gain a trick by leading the Jack of Spades, realising that should he await Declarer's lead of the suit both the King and Jack will fall, if Declarer takes the finesse. Whereas by leading the Jack, Declarer might place the King with East and come up with Dummy's Ace. Declarer, however, sees that he must take two Spade tricks in order to go game, and therefore finesses the Queen. Declarer then takes two rounds of trumps, winning the first trick with the Jack and the second with the Ace, and, finding the adverse trumps split 3-2, leads a third round, exhausting trumps. Declarer then takes the rest of the tricks with his three Clubs and Dummy's Ace of Spades, making game on the hand.

Had West, when in the lead with the King of Clubs, led a Diamond instead of a Spade, the result would have been the same, since Declarer could have ruffed high in Dummy and discarded his losing Spade. Had Declarer led trumps before establishing his Club suit, Dummy could not have furnished the trump protection against the continuance of the Diamond lead.

$65,000 Hub's Total to Palestine Fund

The response made by Jews and non-Jews to the appeal of the Palestine Emergency Fund has been very gratifying to the committee in charge. Boston proper and the communities that make up Greater Boston have responded liberally.

Although the appeal is less than three weeks old, it has netted an average of $3000 a day continuously for five days a week, bringing the total contributions to date to nearly $85,000.

RISKS LIFE AND AVERTS BLAST IN NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., Sept. 19—At the risk of his life, Bernard Fagan, electrician, employed by the Petroleum Supply Company, rushed into the flaming cabin of a gasoline barge here today and prevented an explosion of 60,000 gallons of the highly inflammable fluid by shutting down a pump.

William Dowd, another employe, followed Fagan, and both men were severely burned about the heads, faces, bodies and arms in attempting to extinguish the flames. They were taken to Newport Hospital.

A pumping engine, answering an alarm from box 72, knocked down part of the wall around the estate of Mr. and Mrs. I. Townsend Burden.

Although box 522 was sounded for the barge fire, box 72 in the summer residence section also registered. The steering gear of the pumping engine broke and the heavy apparatus crashed into the main gate of the Burden estate.

The barge was tied up at a dock unloading its cargo of 60,000 gallons of gasoline into tanks that already contained 20,000 gallons.

In some unexplained manner gasoline from one of the tanks leaked into the large cabin and became ignited. It was then that Fagan dove into the flaming cabin and cut off the flow.

Can Recover $110,000 of Waggoner Money

New York, Sept. 19 (INS)—Not more than $110,000 of the $500,000 Charles D. Waggoner obtained from six New York banks can be recovered, according to Postal Inspector Graham.

Graham said title to the balance had now passed to individuals. The recoverable money, Graham said, was located as follows: $45,000 in the Bank of Pueblo, Col.; $45,000 in the Central Hanover Trust, New York; $5000 in the Chase National Bank; $3000 in the Continental National Bank of Salt Lake City, and a $10,000 check sent Waggoner by the Central Hanover Bank when he failed to call for it.

Bury Shipwreck Victims

GINSBURG FOR LESSENING TAX ON SALARIES

"Neither justice nor reason is the basis of the present federal income tax laws."

Rep. Bernard Ginsburg of Dorchester, one of the leaders in the fight against compulsory automobile insurance rates, today gave in these words his indorsement of the Boston Evening American's campaign to reduce federal income tax rates.

"The great trouble with the present law is this," he declared, "that it does not draw the distinction between incomes actually earned and those unearned.

"If one inherits property, for example, I believe he should be made to pay a larger revenue upon such income than one who earns his income.

RAINS SMOTHER FOREST FIRES

Los Angeles, Sept. 19 (AP)—Rain and storms which quenched four major fires, including the disastrous $5,000,000 Ventura county conflagration, had washed out railroad tracks and stalled passenger trains today.

The efforts of five fighters to quell the blaze which blackened 25,000 acres of Ventura watershed, destroyed 126 oil derricks, five schoolhouses and scores of homes were successful when the storm wrapped a heavy blanket of moisture over the scarred countryside.

The town of Stevenson, Wash., is out of danger from a fire that raged for days. It was saved by a shift in the wind. Two other towns, Yacolt, Wash., and Estacada, Ore., also have been saved.

Details of $2,000,000 Foundation Told

Details of a $2,000,000 foundation, approved at the Swampscott council meeting last June, when the General Federation Biennial held its session, are made public for the first time by Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, chairman, board of trustees, through the Federation News.

A quota plan, based on the actual club membership of each state, has been adopted, it is announced, for the purpose of raising a General Federation Foundation fund, one-half of which will go to the Federation and the remaining half to such States as participate in the campaign.

"A letter has been sent to each State president containing, at length, the details for a campaign," Mrs. Burdette outlines. "We suggest that if it is to be carried on as a general State plan, enthusiasm could be generated by several schemes, and if by the individual club unit, the trustees will be glad to furnish such data as they have.

"The necessity for a foundation fund for the General Federation has been set forth under nine headings, amplified to extend the work of the departments and render more help to the States, to undertake important outstanding occasional activities, and to furnish a sound financial basis for the organization.

"The necessities of the States for their 50 per cent of the moneys raised are as varied as the differing conditions in each State. So far as the General Federation is concerned, the fund, when raised, is to be invested and only the interest used for such purposes as have been indicated."

Mrs. Burdette states that the plan follows a $2.50 per capita basis. The States, she explains, have been divided into regional groups. They follow:

Group 1: Represented by Mrs. Walter S. Comly. Comly ave., Port Chester, New York consists of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware.

Group 2: Represented by Mrs. Palmer Jerman, Raleigh, North Carolina, consists of District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

Group 3: Represented by Mrs. Florence C. Floore, Cleburne, Texas, consists of Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Group 4: Represented by Miss Jessie I. Spafford, 401 East State st., Rockford, Illinois, consists of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Michigan.

Group 5: Represented by Mrs. Joshua Hodgins, Marinette, Wisconsin, consists of Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas.

Group 6: Represented by Dr. Clara B. Burdette, Hotel Huntington, Pasadena, California, consists of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico.

PEABODY WOMEN'S CLUB

The opening meeting takes place October 4 in the South Church vestry with the art committee, of which Miss Alice Trask is chairman, in charge. A shawl pageant, in which club members will be featured, will portray the picturesque and romantic history of the shawl. Mrs. Lawrence C. Putnam is president of this club, the membership of which is close to 200.

PRO PARVULIS CLUB

Gaspar G. Bacon, president of the Massachusetts Senate, who recently returned from Europe, will make his first public address since his return before members of this enterprising group of Greater Boston girls next Sunday afternoon at 3:30 at the League house, 1 Arlington st.

A widely known authority on constitutional law, Mr. Bacon is author and publisher of the latest book on the Constitution of the United States. It is on some phase of this question, coupled with interesting narratives of his travels in foreign countries, that he will address the Pro Parvulis Club.

Following the meeting a musicale will be held. Miss Frances Willis is president of the club.

WOMEN'S REPUBLICAN CLUB

A political garden party to which George R. Stobbs and Amos L. Taylor are the invited guests and speakers, will be held next Wednesday afternoon at 3 p. m. at "Oakhurst," Whitinsville, the estate of Mrs. Chester Whitin Lasell, chairman of the Worcester County division of the Massachusetts organization. Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs, state president, will also speak.

GENERAL FEDERATION

Into the Totem-Land did Mrs. John F. Sipple, national president, go recently and a most enjoyable trip it was.

She returned with the impression that "no group is working harder for better laws for women and children, then is the Alaska Federation.

The furthermost northern country has a club Federation which is part of the General Federation. This group in the frozen north was organized 13 years ago, but has never had a convention. The expansive lands and rigorous climates have precluded such get-togethers. But the advantages of modernity have served the women of this region well and they have done their work well.

LAUD TALLMAN FOR BRAVERY, CLEVERNESS

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

They may come and they may go, but they never come as good as "Hankis Pankis" Tallman.

We don't like to write about one of the boys when he "goes west," but you will have to pardon us if we dwell on Tallman for just a moment.

Height 6 ft. 3½ in.; clever as they are made; brave; good fellow, you can't find any better; pilot, none could compare; man—all the way through.

This is what the gang at Boston, Hartford and Newark airports thought of Tallman. Loved by everyone; fearing nothing; a good boy through and through.

We have listened to him time after time declare that he would be the last fellow in the world to "get it." "Listen, George," he used to say, "when it gets so that I can't see my way, and I think it is dangerous, I'm turning back."

He tried, but the fog beat him to it, and closed in behind him. The hill was next and, final landing field of Henry E. "Hankis Pankis" Tallman. Aviation has lost one among its best pilots.

Outside of the Colonial tri-motors, a six ship formation by Skyways and a little miscellaneous flying by the rest of the boys, there wasn't any thing doing at the airport all day, after the news of Tallman's death was received. The boys gathered in groups, discussing the untimely end of Hank.

Skyways brought out six planes, three Moths, a Stearman, Bellanca and Monocoupe, and flew over Boston, advertising the florists' convention. Led by Crocker Snow in the Stearman, Jack Langley flew on the right with the Bellanca and Charlie Emerson on the left in the Monocoupe. The Moths were flown by "Swede" Parker, Al Libbey and Hank Carter. Both formations presented a pretty picture to watchers as the fliers swept over the city.

Such formation flights by commercial fliers are rarely seen. We think the boys should be congratulated for their showing.

Ray Wonsey, tri-motor pilot for Colonial, told us that a Mr. Jeffries of Philadelphia, made his 20th trip on the Boston-New York passenger run. This is a long distance record for flights over the Colonial service and Ray says Jeffries has promised to make many more.

Flying his Arrow Sport, Carey Pridham, pilot on the tri-motor line, gave the spectators a taste of stunt flying. Climbing to a couple of thousand feet, he turned the little ship inside out, and when Carey finally landed, he declared that the little bus was getting better and better every day.

THE QUESTION BOX, a former feature of this column, will again appear, beginning Saturday. All questions pertaining to aviation will be answered in this department. If we can't answer them we will find someone who can. Send 'em in.

GOV. GARDINER WARNS AGAINST PRISON LABOR

Portland, Me., Sept. 19—Indicating the effect that the Hawes-Cooper prison labor bill will have in prison industries five years from now, Governor Gardiner, in an address before the Maine Federation of Women's Clubs, urged the necessity of making plans well in advance to meet the situation at that time.

"If we are to give prisoners employment" he said, "we make them producers, and it must be conceded that to some extent, somewhere, they must come into competition with free men and women who are or who might be laborers in the same field. The problem is to keep such competition at a minimum and free labor has the right to expect such protection as may be consistent with successful operation of prisons. The natural laws of economics are suspended and the power that controls the prison has a dual responsibility toward those outside as well as those inside the walls.

"It is natural that a state should seek first of all to protect its own people and regulate prison industry so as to interfere locally as little as possible. But the problem transcends state lines. In the struggle to make prisons partially self-supporting, it is essential that there be little conflict between the states and important that the problem be regarded nationally."

BRITISH STATESMAN PRAISES HEARST WORK FOR WORLD PEACE

SAYS U. S. AND BRITAIN MUST JOIN HANDS

viction that the peace of the world can best be secured by the co-operation of the two great English-speaking democracies."

Churchill alluded to Disraeli, speaking of the early 19th century as the time when England was for the few, the very few." He added that "Our task now in this modern century, this new age is to make a broader, brighter, surer, healthier, happier life, not for the few, but for the many, and not alone for the many but, ultimately, for all, or almost all."

Churchill does not now occupy an official place in England's government, but a man of his political, intellectual and social place, does always, in a way, represent his country.

HIDDEN IN FLOWERS

The Metropolitan Opera Company's famous baritone sang "On the Road to Mandalay" and Cecil Cunningham sang two songs.

Lawrence Gray, who played in the delightful picture in which Miss Marion Davies has scored so high a triumph, "Marianne," led a group of Sammy Lee's chorus girls, who made everybody present sit up and look.

The entertainment features were in charge of Gus Edwards, former star of the vaudeville stage, and now of the pictures.

Then came the big act.

When the noted guest made his little talk, there had been hidden in a bouquet of flowers in front of him a microphone. Churchill did not know this.

REPRODUCED

Toward the close of the luncheon Niblo spoke in glowing terms of the address by Churchill. He said it was so brilliant that he would like to hear it again, that he felt sure everyone would like to hear it again and probably Churchill would enjoy hearing it again.

From a loud speaker came his speech in exact reproduction, conveying even the personality of the man.

It was a bit of wizardry to hear a machine give you word for word and tone for tone an address which had the moment before charmed you.

In his talk, Churchill said there was but one regret he felt about his visit, which was that he had never been in California before.

Sees U. S. and Britain as One in Interest

Los Angeles, Sept. 19—Toastmaster Fred Niblo introduced the Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill in the following language:

"Ladies and gentlemen, the guest of honor has come from his home, which is half-way around the world from here—that seems an awfully long distance—from a country that America owes much to, because she not only gave us our language that we speak—some of us speak it with varying degrees of correctness, but notwithstanding that, make ourselves understood with the darn thing—but he comes from a country that has given us traditions, the foundation of our laws, the ideals of the very civilization that has made us successfully progressive and happy.

"In introducing the speaker I am not only going to introduce him as one of the world's most distinguished statesmen, but also as an author, as a painter, as a journalist, as a loyal citizen, as a soldier, as a patriot. I have the honor, ladies and gentlemen, of introducing the Rt.-Hon. Winston Churchill." (Applause).

EXPRESSES THANKS

Churchill replied as follows:

"Mr. Mayer, Your Excellency, Mr. Hearst, ladies and gentlemen: In expressing my thanks to you for your kind welcome, and to our hosts for the all too flattering terms in which they have referred to me, I feel I ought also to express all our boundless gratification for the brilliant, the too brief but brilliant entertainment with which this feast and festival of rejoicing has been accompanied and crowned. I feel I shall in that respect discharge a task in which I unite the overwhelming majority of those who are present.

"I am here as a traveler on a holiday. It happened in this way: For nearly 20 years out of the last 24 I have been in public office in Great Britain, and at the last election there seemed to be a sort of general feeling, a feeling at any rate which was noticeable in some quarters, that I ought to have a holiday.

"And I remembered the old saying, which I daresay you may have heard, and perhaps lived up to, or some of you, 'hitch your wagon to a star.' So I said, 'I will go out to California and look at the stars.'

VISITS OBSERVATORY

"So I went to the Lick Observatory where Prof. Campbell showed me through the long telescope, and I admit at a very considerable distance, the radiant bodies which fill the heavens; and the only one I should not have tried to look at was the planet Mars, because I knew I was going to stay with our friend Mr. Hearst, whose aversion to war has sometimes led him to suspect me as not being as high and great and 100 per cent pacifist as he would think I ought to be.

"I am now prolonging my tour through California and I have been carrying on my study at the educational institutions, and so I find myself here today.

"You are an educational institution which spreads its influence all over the world, from one end of the globe to the other, a wonderful new influence and process of education and civilization, which has come into being almost during the last decade.

"Mr. Disraeli, the great English prime minister, writing in his novels of the beginning of the nineteenth century, said, 'In those days England was for the few and for the very few.' But our task now in this modern century, this new age, is to make a broader, brighter, surer, healthier, happier life, not for the few, but for the many, and not only for the many, but ultimately for all, or almost all.

VEHICLE OF ART

"The great agencies and instruments of science are arriving on the wings of Time and enable us to give to the great mass of human beings who care to dwell together in peace and quiet many new forms of pleasure, of enlightment, of diversion and of occupation.

"Particularly are they of value to those who dwell widely spread about in the great spaces of the world, in Canada, in the agricultural districts of the United States, where the cultivator of the soil discharges that fundamental, primary duty on which we all depend to live, will be able to enjoy increasingly the pleasures, the novelties of keener life, which hitherto has been reserved for the urban dweller.

"And the work that is being done here, and also in the broadcasting sphere, plays a necessary and essential part in this great broadening of the joys and pleasures of life and in the consciousness of its varieties of charm, spreading it ever more widely throughout the world.

"I know there are superior people who turn up their—perhaps I should say their brows, but who turn up their noses. If you like, at the forms of art which are purveyed to the public through the moving picture, but, ladies and gentlemen, now that speech is added to action, and it is being increasingly woven into the texture of these presentations, there can be no doubt that a field is opened in which the highest form of the dramatic art which could ever have been received will receive the greatest extension and publicity, and I trust, the highest reward.

CARE NEEDED

"Sometimes one feels that we ought to be careful, not you, but the governments, when the scenes with which we amuse ourselves in America and in Europe are perhaps crudely presented to Asiatic or African populations.

"That is a matter which I think should be considered. Because no one part of the world can fully understand the elements of humor and of diversion which enter into the amusements of the others.

"But apart from that, I am quite sure that all the process of interesting the public, of amusing the public, in which your industry plays so important a part, is an essential feature in the present rapid, onward march of civilization, and will ever increasingly present to the human mind ideas and conceptions which will take the place of those fears and brutality of warlike peoples, which even in our own time we have seen almost wreck our own fortunes.

"Ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Mayer in his speech, and Mr. Hearst, have followed His Excellency, the Governor, in making references to my country and also to His Majesty, King George, which I most deeply appreciate, and which I gratefully acknowledge.

"I saw these two flags when I entered this room with a feeling of joy, because that is not only an emblem of the association of two great peoples, equipped with power and wealth and armed with science and knowledge, who speak a common tongue and enjoy a common law, and who have developed the same institutions, and look back all through the centuries to a dim majestic past; it is not only a symbol of their association, but it is the secret of the future of the world; there is the peace and safety in the world. (Applause).

LAUDS CALIFORNIA

"I rejoiced to hear my friend, Mr. Hearst, who wields such enormous influence, express in such decided and measured terms his conviction that the peace of the world can best be assured by the co-operation of the two great English-speaking democracies.

"All I can say is that such language will never be used, such sentiments will never be expressed on this side of the Atlantic Ocean without a sincere and even an eager response from our small island in the northern seas. (Applause.)

"I have one more word to say, and that is about California. I have now motored 1500 miles through California, so I have seen this beautiful maritime state as much as anyone can see it on so short a time and have appreciated its beauty, the charm of its settings, scenery, its agreeable, tranquil, equable, congenial climate.

"I have enjoyed the delightful, spacious hospitalities which it in the pride of California to offer. I have seen your big trees, your big men and I have seen with the eye of the mind your big future, and I have only one regret, only one pang which racks my bosom, and that is that I have never been here before." (Applause.)

Start Organizing World Bank Oct. 7

Paris, Sept. 19 (AP)—The organization committee of the international bank provided by the Owen D. Young reparations plan, says the Petit Parisien, in all probability will begin work October 7 at Wiesbaden, Germany, after a preliminary meeting October 3 at a city yet to be chosen.

Negotiations for the meeting of the committee, which at first encountered numerous obstacles, are now proceeding in a most conciliatory spirit.

Hearst Makes Plea for World Peace

Los Angeles, Sept. 19—In introducing William Randolph Hearst at the luncheon to the Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, Fred Niblo, the toastmaster, said:

"Mr. Mayer said that we could have filled a room ten times this size and that is easily believed. Mr. Mayer and Mr. Hearst both thought that it would be better to make this a sort of informal reception and informal luncheon, at fresco, so to speak, where we could gather and just be a little bit different to anything that might be done in other cities, because we have beautiful hotels here.

"I thought I saw a couple of hotelmen here a little while ago, and we have many beautiful hotels where this could have been held. I saw Mr. Abe Frank and Charlie Baad and there is the Roosevelt Hotel in Hollywood, the Ambassador, the Biltmore—and the Roosevelt Hotel in Hollywood. (Laughter).

"The next speaker, fortunately, is an American and I guess the greatest defender of anything Californian. In fact, I might say that the country 'America' is named after one of his papers, The New York American.

"I take great pleasure in introducing the Hon. William Randolph Hearst. (Applause.)

FOR NO SPEECHES

Mr. Hearst spoke as follows:

"Mr. Toastmaster, honored guests and ladies and gentlemen:

"I don't know exactly what to say. I came down from the ranch last night with Mr. Churchill and we were six hours in the automobile and I told him everything that I know anything about and a lot of things that I don't know anything about.

"I am sure he enjoyed the conversation because he fell into the most peaceful and profound slumber and remained there. (Laughter.)

"And when he woke up, he said: I hope to goodness there isn't going to be any talking at the luncheon tomorrow, because I am looking forward to that as a pleasurable occasion.'—Like the man who did not take his wife because he wanted his trip abroad to be purely a pleasure trip.

"I tried to reassure him and said: 'I don't think there will be much formal speaking and that, anyhow, I won't make a formal speech.' And that did seem to relieve him a lot. In fact, he was comparatively cheerful after that.

URGES PEACE UNION

"And moreover, I don't see why there should be any speeches, because we decided everything that was of any value to humanity on that trip; and I don't even see why they should have those conversations in Washington now. It is like arriving at church in the middle of the doxology, or arriving at the theater just as the ushers are saying, 'All over! Out this way!'

"But I did not overlook, in our talk, the significance of the conjunction of those two flags on the wall. I told him that our peoples' one ideal, our greatest ideal, was world peace and that it was almost a fanaticism with us.

"He said, I suppose you wanted peace bad enough to fight for it. I said, "We did want peace bad enough to fight for it, and we did fight for it, because that was our main reason for entering the World War; and when we got it, or helped to get it, that was the only thing we got out of the war, and the only thing we wanted to get out of the war, but we do want to keep the thing that we got, and we believe that the best way to keep it is through a co-operative union of the English-speaking nations of the world.' (Applause).

"This is an age of organization, of co-operation, or combination in business, and the principle might well apply to international politics. But when we make a merger in business we merge harmonious activities.

HARMONIOUS UNITS

"We do not make a merger of a moving picture company and a milk farm—possibly because the moving picture people do not drink milk, except on formal occasions of this kind (laughter)—but mainly because we want to merge harmonious units.

"If we made an alliance, we would not want to make one with a warlike country, that contemplated war. We would want to make an alliance to promote peace among ourselves, and as far as possible to establish peace throughout the world.

"I was unanimous (laughter) in my indorsement of this Anglo-American union, and I think Mr. Churchill would have been unanimous, too, except for the fact, as I previously mentioned, he was asleep during most of the ride here. But I notice he is particularly awake today, especially as he looks around the room and sees the many beautiful women that are here; and I do not want to put him to sleep again, so I am going to stop and thank you." (Applause).

Bay State Men May Get Militia Post

Washington, Sept. 19 (AP)—Secretary Good expects to be able to recommend to President Hoover, before the end of the week, a man to fill the long vacant post of chief of the militia bureau. Intense interest has been shown in military and national guard circles in the appointment, and recommendations have been submitted by governors of 40 states.

Col. E. R. Redman, a Massachusetts national guardsman, has been acting chief and is understood to be under consideration for the post.

POST-SEASON BERRIES NOW ON MARKETS

Strawberry shortcake, a delicacy the passing of which was a subject of regret for more than one person, is again in the limelight with the arrival of a shipment of post-season berries in Boston markets this week.

The strawberries displayed are priced from 60 to 70 cents and are of the everbearing variety. Grapes at 20 cents per pound, with Concord and Niagara at 30 cents per basket, are plentiful and fairly good in quality.

Cantaloupes may be obtained as low as 20 cents, but are of poor grade. Honeydews retail at 75 cents, with some at 50 cents. Pineapples maintain their level of 50 cents and are high at 60 cents. Lemons are scarce and those found in local markets for the most part are far below standard.

BLUEBERRIES ON HAND

Oranges range from 40 cents to $1 per dozen and peaches are marked 85 cents per basket, with natives at $1.25 per 14 quart basket. Pears of the Bartlett variety are 75 cents per dozen, although a good grade is displayed at 60 cents.

Blueberries are still on the market and are priced at a top of 60 cents. First quality native apples retail at 75 cents per dozen, with Gravensteins for cooking purposes at 25 cents for three pounds.

Prices of vegetables remain the same as last week but indications of a higher level for next week are apparent. Shoppers will find Maine potatoes at 60 cents per peck, tomatoes at 15 cents per pound and selected corn at 60 cents per dozen. Beets are 10 cents per bunch, cranberries retail at 25 cents per quart and mushrooms sell at 85 cents per pound.

Fancy fowl range from 42 to 44 cents, with native chickens at 48 cents, and broilers at 45 cents. Squabs, bled and picked, vary from 90 cents to $1.25, while fancy ducks are displayed at 35 cents. Small fresh turkeys have made their appearance and sell at 90 cents.

PRICES STABLE

Little change is apparent in prices of dairy products, fancy eggs retailing at 55 cents, hennery pullets at 57 cents and Western eggs at 50 cents.

Best tub butter is marked at 60 cents, with pound cubes offered at 62 cents. Unsalted prints are priced from 65 to 75 cents. Extra mild cheese may be obtained for 35 cents, while medium and old command 38 cents. Club cheese are in evidence at 40 cents, with Young America at 35 cents and Swiss at 65 cents.

FRIENDS TO AID BANKER HELD FOR THEFT

Lewiston, Me., Sept. 19—With relatives and close personal friends rallying to the aid of Wilbur H. Davis, confessed embezzler of the Peoples Saving Bank, it seems certain that every penny alleged to have been taken by Davis would be dropped in the coffers of the bank by the end of September.

Mrs. Gertrude L. Davis, wife of the former treasurer and his father, Louis Davis, a former sheriff, promised bank officials they would make every effort to replace the funds which Davis admits taking.

Three wealthy Auburn business men whose names are being withheld visited the offices of Dana S. Williams, counsel for the accused, and offered to assist Mrs. Davis and Davis' father in making up the shortage. To aid her husband, Mrs. Davis must part with her home.

The officials of the Peoples Savings Bank announced after a conference with officials of several Portland stock brokerage offices that a large part of the money will be recovered in Portland within a week.

Police officials of Lewiston are checking up on a report that Davis was the victim of a group of persons who enticed him to join a stock pool and after making considerable money left him holding the bag.

Davis was dejected as he paced his cell in the Auburn County jail.

It was a pathetic scene that greeted harassed jailers at the Auburn County jail when the aged father of Davis arrived to talk with his son and comfort him as best he could, standing in the same cell room where he was once the turnkey and where he had often seen a similar drama enacted.

23 Dead in German Coal Mine Disaster

Saarsruecken, Germany, Sept. 19 (AP)—The seriousness of the St. Charles coal mine disaster, reported three days ago, is growing hourly, with a death list of 23 and 25 injured.

After three days' continuous fighting against the underground fire the blaze continues with undiminished seriousness and tremors occasionally felt indicate further explosions have occurred in the depths of the subterranean galleries which it is impossible to enter to recover bodies of the victims.

ATWATER KENT RADIO

Why wait!

—when all the time you could be listening to an Atwater Kent SCREEN-GRID

YOU are listening to all the discussions about radio. The technical claims for one set or another mean very little to you.

But three facts have probably stayed in your mind.

One is that the Atwater Kent Screen-Grid, combining not only the big improvements but the countless small refinements, was the first perfected Screen-Grid set and is now the largest-selling radio in the world. It's Atwater Kent's method of using the new Screen-Grid tubes that gets such amazing results.

Another is—with 27 years' experience, including 7 years of radio, Atwater Kent naturally has an advantage over manufacturers who are just trying their wings in radio for the first time. You believe in buying from experienced people, don't you?

And finally, the demand for Atwater Kent Radio (more than 2,500,000 sets sold) has built up not only the largest but the finest radio factory. It covers 32 acres of floor space. Our own engineers have developed machinery which shares with thousands of human hands the work of producing radio sets that are as fine as can be made, yet are moderately priced.

Isn't this exactly the kind of modern radio you hoped to own?

Well, while the technical talk runs on and on, you can just as well be roaming the air these September evenings with the radio that argues nothing but proves everything. A very good time to see an Atwater Kent dealer (he'll show you a variety of distinctive cabinets) is RIGHT NOW.

Why this SCREEN-GRID radio is SO MUCH better

Special Screen-Grid circuit, perfected by Atwater Kent to make complete use of the new Screen-Grid tubes.

Many times more amplification and sensitivity with new Screen-Grid tubes.

Needle-point selectivity, made possible by Atwater Kent method of using Screen-Grid tubes.

Plate detection, purifying tone quality by eliminating distortion.

First audio stage resistancecoupled, permitting full use of two "45" power tubes in push-pull to reproduce rich, low tones.

Maximum undistorted output, more volume than you can use, controllable at will.

752 tests in course of manufacture. Also tested under extremes of temperature and humidity.

Illuminated dial, marked in kilocycles.

Can be used with short indoor antenna.

Widest choice of exquisite cabinets.

On the Air—Atwater Kent Radio Hour—Sunday Evenings, 9:15 (Eastern Daylight Time), WEAF network of N. B. C. Atwater Kent Mid-Week Program—Thursday Evenings, 10:00 (Eastern Daylight Time), WJZ network of N. B. C.

'GREAT DAY' BRIGHT AND GLORIOUSLY SUNNY

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THE youthful Vincent Youmans, composer extraordinary, now turns impresario for better or worse. When all the wrinkles are ironed out of "Great Day," now current at the Colonial, Mr. Youmans will not only be a happier boy, but, perhaps, a richer one. For one thing this young man has not lost the trick of turning out melodies of quality; nor does he fumble a single gesture in their presentation.

WHILE Mr. Youmans' score early becomes the ruling feature of "Great Day," the story is not without merit. For the first time, as far as this reviewer can recall, Mississippi floods are dragged into drama, and sans song and dance. There is more stern drama in the unfolding scenes than comedy. Romance at the cross-roads, or, if you prefer, at the old plantation, keeps the principals in a continuous stew for about three hours. There is fun in suitable quantity, however, but a good deal of it is dragged in by the ears.

Nicholas Young

THIS does not generally apply to the drolleries of Walter C. Kelly, famed "Virginia Judge" of vaudeville at its peak, who now finds himself making the most of an evening devoted to innocent temptations from gay Southern belles and doing his best to dodge matrimonial complications fostered by his own daughter and comically urged by a none too fair feminine prospect in the adventure. Mr. Kelly, at that, slips out of his character at intervals and puts his audience in good cheer with quaint observations from the judicial bench. Mauds Eburne lends aid, comfort and misery to Kelly's duty-ance and she does it well.

THE outstanding numbers of "Great Day" are undoubtedly Mr. Youmans' own conceptions. A chorus of jubilee singers, led by Louis Deppe, on two occasions bring the proceedings to a full halt. This company of colored singers lift loud and glorious voices in great gusto. Not in many months, perhaps never before, has a group of negro singers done finer work for the white man's drama. The title song, "Great Day," fairly raises the audience in its chairs. More spontaneous applause has never rocked the Colonial. In this number Louis Deppe takes his audience by storm.

THE familiar humors of Miller and Lyles, tanned comedians of long standing, are mostly interpolated. They are woven into the story like any smart feature caught unawares and drafted for musical comedy. A sharp pair of shears, judiciously plied, might be suggested—if suggestions are in good order. Leonard Ceeley, a warrior of many battles in musical plays, lifts a stirring voice and makes it a mighty demonstration of effort and power. Mayo Methot, dainty and demure, plays her own part in the romance of the narrative. As an excellent young actress just promoted from the spoken drama to bolster musical comedy, it is not unnatural that some of Mr. Youmans' song numbers should make the going a trifle heavy.

NOT so with Laura Lee, fair-haired ingenue, who knows her musical show no matter what its title may be; nor Oliver McLennan, for whom juvenile heroics are just nothing at all —merely a flip and a clinch. As an example of Southern indolence Mr. Youmans has drawn upon Charles Lawrence. He becomes, for the good of "Great Day," both idler and boy comic. He fills the bill acceptably.

"GREAT DAY" will be remembered for its impressive ensembles by the colored singers. Any of Louis Deppe's songs, flanked by that dark-skinned chorus, is worth not only a second visit, but a third, and more.

Midnight Show at B. F. Keith's

ANNOUNCEMENT was made by New England Manager Charles L. Winston for R. K. O. that the midnight premiere tomorrow night of "The Cock-Eyed World," the all talking mirth-quake at the New B. F. Keith, was prompted by an overwhelming demand from local theatergoers for as early a showing as possible.

Simultaneous with this announcement came word from New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis and Detroit that this hilarious production, co-starring Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe and Lily Damita, had scored so sensationally that it has been deemed necessary to hold it over for a fourth week. In New York it will be the eighth week of "The Cock-Eyed World," for, previously, it played to four world's record weeks at the Roxy Theater.

"A Lady in Love" Next Brent Film

"A Lady in Love," an original story by Florence Ryerson, has been selected as Evelyn Brent's second starring picture, it was announced today by B. P. Schulberg. It will be filmed at the Hollywood studios under the direction of Dorothy Arzner and George Cukor, and will present as Miss Brent's leading man the popular Clive Brook.

Miss Brent has just completed her work in "Darkened Rooms," which production makes her debut as a star. She is now en route for Europe, where she will vacation, with a Daniel N. Rubin author of the play, "Women Go On Forever," is preparing the the adaptation and dialogue for Mrs. Ryerson's original story. Clive Brook is at present working at the Paramount Long Island studio as Jeanne Eagels' leading man in "The Laughing Lady."

Crosland Latest on Directorial Staff

First National has increased its directorial staff with the addition of Alan Crosland. Crosland's first assignment is "Furies" from the stage play by Zoe Akins, in which Lois Wilson and H. B. Warner will have the leading roles. Other directors now engaged in production on the First National lot include: Alexander Korda, Francis Dillon, Frank Lloyd, Clarence Badger, William A. Seiter, Mervyn Le Roy, Ted Wilde, William Beaudine and Eddie Cline.

Ornato Produces Revues for R-K-O

Joseph Ornato, stage and screen director, who recently turned producer, will not only be active in the legitimate field this season, but he will also produce a number of miniature vaudeville revues for RKO. The first of these units, called "Ornato Frolics," is completed.

Lily Damita Gets Role in Musical

Connolly and Swanson announced that through the courtesy of Samuel Goldwyn, film magnate, they had engaged Lily Damita, the screen star, to appear in the role of a French girl opposite Jack Donahue in their musical play, 'Tin Hats."

Completes Sound Film

Neal Hart has completed interior scenes of "His Destiny," sound-dialogue production at the Chromotone Film Studios, for William Steiner. In addition to directing, Hart stars in the film, supported by Barbara Kent. Exteriors were made in the Canadian Rockies of Alberta. Special music was written and directed for the picture by Adolf Philipp.

"The Children"

FOX STUDIO CITY GROWS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 19—More milestones along the path of progress of Fox Films are indicated by forthcoming events at Fox Movietone City, the $10,000,000 studio city at Westwood. Two new edifices, a laboratory of engineering research and a Cafe de Paris, have just been dedicated and opened.

The laboratory reflects the last word in equipment for the tremendous volume of research necessary in connection with talking pictures. The cafe, a replica of the famous eating-place in the French capital, has been constructed to seat comfortably 500 diners.

Later, the most artistic building of all the newly erected ones at Fox Movietone City, the Hall of Music, will be dedicated likewise with fitting ceremonies.

Jolson Film Starts Soon

Al Jolson's next Vitaphone picture, based on Irving Berlin's "Mr. Bones," goes into production next week under direction of Michael Curtis. It will come to the screen as "Mammy." Lois Moran will have the feminine lead. Other players will be Louise Dresser, Lowell Sherman, Tully Marshall and Mitchell Lewis.

Stars Again

NANCY CARROLL, who is starring in "Illusion," playing at the Metropolitan Theater.

PATHE PLANS PROGRESS

WORK on its program for the coming year is well under way at Pathe. Already 12 of the 30 productions planned for the new season have been completed or are in production.

Completed pictures include "Paris Bound," "The Sophomore," "Big News," "Sailors' Holiday," "The Awful Truth," "Her Private Affair," "Oh, Yeah!" and "The Racketeer." James Gleason and Robert Armstrong are featured in "Oh, Yeah!"

Films in production are "Red Hot Rhythm," with Alan Hale, Kathryn Crawford, Josephine Dunn and Walter O'Keefe; "Hot People," with Constance Bennett, Robert Ames, Regis Toomey, Mahlon Hamilton, John Lodor and Ilka Chase; "His First Command," with William Boyd and Dorothy Sebastian; "This Thing Called Love," with Constance Bennett and Zasu Pitts, and "The Grand Parade," with Helen Twelvetrees, Fred Scott, Richard Carle, Marie Astaire, Russel Powell, Bud Jamieson and Tom Mahoney. The last, a story of minstrel life by Howard Emmett Rogers, is being directed by Fred Newmeyer.

AL SMITH AND HIS DERBY MAY STAR IN TALKIE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service)

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 19—Al Smith's brown derby hat, big black cigar, the Lower East Side and the Fulton fish market which Smith himself mentioned as his alma mater, may figure in a talkie. William Fox and Winfield Sheehan, who are among the former Governor's closest friends, are said to be negotiating with Smith for the story of his life.

Louella Parsons

What the head of the Fox company really wants is to persuade Al to play himself. That may not be impossible, either, with the Rev. Billy Sunday, Titto Ruffo and other accepting offers to come to Hollywood.

Following the recent presidential election, in which Al Smith figured as the defeated candidate, he was asked to write the story of his life for a weekly magazine. He accepted, and it is that story plus other material that is interesting the Fox company.

WHO do you think will soon be strolling around the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, monocle and all? None other than our friend, Eric Von Stroheim, the director who has the reputation of having spent more money directing pictures than any other living person in the film industry. Be that as it may, Von Stroheim has talent, in fact, he has been called a genius by some people. He will not direct, however, on the M. G. M. lot, but he will write. He has an idea which he sold Hunt Stromberg, and he will put it on paper as a story, and there is a very big chance that he will act. You, it seems, knows his acting as well as directing, and, in this case, there isn't so much grief attached to authorship.

WILL ROGERS' life is stranger than fiction. Anyone who has heard about his rise from cowboy to Ziegfeld "Follies" star cannot help but be intrigued by the story. It has the Horatio Alger stories backed off the board, if you will pardon my coarse language. Ben Ames Williams, who has been brought here by the Fox Company to write motion picture stories, will get busy with the old typewriter on this Rogers' biography, and then it will be put into a talkie. After seeing "They Had to See Paris," I am all for Will Rogers and dialogue.

IF you saw "Broadway" on the stage or screen you remember Tommy Jackson was just grand. Not only the flappers and their boy friends but the business men and their wives were all for him. Tommy has something. I don't know what it is, it isn't exactly "it," but it is an appeal, and with luck, perhaps that is better than being a male Clara Bow. Jackson is to be starred now in a sequel to "Broadway" to be called "The Homicide Squad." Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht who wrote "The Front Page" have written this story, which Universal is shortly to put on the screen.

THINGS we hear: Constance Bennett is leaving for Paris about the 20th of October. She will have finished her picture for Pathe by that time and will go abroad to spend some time in her home there and possibly get a new wardrobe. Lupe Velez in Tampa telegraphs that she is a very lucky girl because the governor and the mayor welcomed her. Wonder what Tampa thought of Hollywood's Mexican cyclone. Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe will make a sequel to "What Price Glory" and "The Cockeyed World." It is to be an annual event so we hear. Mr. and Mrs. Darry Zanuck are to be guests of honor at a huge party given at the Warner Brothers studio Friday evening by Jack Hazzard.

HUB GIRLS IN POPULARITY CONTEST

Mysterious Veiled Lady Is to Figure in Race Promoted by the Majestic Radio

At a luncheon filled with surprises, executives of Grigsby-Grunow Co., manufacturers of Majestic Radio, yesterday were hosts to the Copley-Plaza to nearly 200 Majestic dealers of Greater Boston.

The first surprise was the disclosure of the fact that the mysterious veiled lady who has set tongues wagging all over Boston this week is the Mistress of Ceremonies in the great "Miss Majestic Popularity Contest" which was announced and set in motion at the luncheon.

The lady herself, unveiled, but wearing a dainty lace mask, was a guest at the luncheon, and addressed the gathering in purest Castillian Spanish. Her remarks, translated by E. H. McCarthy, National Director of Miss Majestic Contests, were in the form of a greeting and a promise that her identity would be revealed at the close of the contest.

OUTLINES YEAR'S PLANS

Prior to the appearance of the masked lady, Jerry Rutherford, New England district manager for Majestic Radio, introduced Herbert E. Young, general sales manager of Grigsby-Grunow Company, who outlined to the dealers the publicity and production plans of the company for the coming year.

Mr. Young said in part that Majestic models are to continue unchanged for another year at least, both as to manufacture, design and price. He stated further that the company is already committed to an expansion program that will increase its present force of 13,000 employes by nearly 60 per cent. As to publicity, Mr. Young outlined a program ambitious in scope and comprehensive in detail, embracing all important avenues of advertising and with strong emphasis on the use of newspaper space.

THE POPULARITY CONTEST

Mr. McCarthy was responsible for the second surprise of the day when he told about the Popularity Contest which Majestic Radio inaugurates today. On the basis of votes, secured by various means, Grigsby-Grunow Co. is to select a Greater Boston girl, or woman, to be known as "Miss Majestic," and who will receive a prize award consisting of a model 181 Majestic radio, a complete sports ensemble from a leading specialty shop and a round trip to Bermuda for golf and a companion with all expenses paid.

Nine other prizes were announced and it was stated additional awards will be made from time to time by the individual cooperating dealers. Meanwhile, Miss Majestic Popularity Contest headquarters have been opened at 224 Tremont st., Boston, where it is expected floods of entry blanks and accompanying photographs soon will begin to arrive.

2 KIDNAPED BY CHICAGO GANG

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP)—Double kidnaping that boded double murder started the stew of Chicago gang outlawry boiling again today.

Two men, driving on South Parkway near 42nd st., were abducted by four men. "Squawkers" and "stool pigeons" were epithets the abductors used as they yanked their victims from a sedan and loaded them into a touring car.

The automobile drove away before a cab driver could notify police. There was little doubt in the mind of Deputy Police Commissioner John Stege that the two men had been "taken for a ride" and killed.

The car driver, who begged police to withhold his name, drew alongside the two cars while the abduction was going on. He thought there had been an accident, and went to offer assistance. He and the driver of the abductor's car had a sawed-off shotgun across his knee.

"He told me to get out, or I'd get it, too," the cab driver said.

The kidnaping followed the usual technique employed by gangsters, and police felt certain there would be the usual sequel—two bodies found "somewhere in Chicago."

Parents Are Hit by Playground Fever

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 19 (AP)—A determined effort is being made in Evanston to make the grownups act their age. The adults have been making whoopee on the children's playgrounds much to the children's disgust. Police have had to order the parents out of the Grey Park Playground, where they became so numerous there wasn't room for the children even in the grass.

Police and the recreational complex has caused many parents to spend hours on the playgrounds that previously were spent at home or at the office. They have taken to the swings and slides, the baseball field and merry-go-rounds with an enthusiasm as surprising as it is unexplainable.

Parents Defy School Board in Strike

Swansea, Sept. 19—With the parents of five striking pupils of Stevens school facing arrest for keeping their children out of school, the local school board is expected to meet tomorrow night to reach a decision on the bus transportation row, which caused the walkout a week ago.

Refusal of the school board to provide bus service for the children who live in a wooded section of the town, remote from the school, is given as the reason for the school strike.

A break in the ranks of the school strikers occurred when the two children of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Wood, in the Wood st. section, gave up the battle and returned to their classrooms.

Horace F. Bates, a native of Quincy, who is superintendent of Somerset and Swansea schools, said that fear that their children might not find room in the new Stevens school, a model new building, may have induced the parents of the Wood children to weaken and send the two back to school. He admitted that the other families involved remain adamant.

BIG RUM FRAUD IS EXPOSED

San Francisco, Sept. 19 (AP)—Fraudulent withdrawals of large quantities of bonded liquor from government warehouses today had resulted in the arrest of two men.

Warrant, charging conspiracy to violate th prohibition laws were issued against the four accused persons. They are Mrs. Agnes A. Cress, confidential clerk for a large wholesale liquor company; Daniel J. Cottrell, former cashier of the United States customs service here, Charles Schmitz, customs broker, and R. N. MacWilliams, proprietor of a pharmacy.

Cottrell and MacWilliams were arrested.

The scheme was based upon the fact that masters of vessels can obtain liquors for their ships' medical stores through an application, of which five copies are signed by various officials.

Yacht Saves Balloon and 4 Men in Lake

Toledo, O., Sept. 19 (AP)—Four persons sinking in a faulty balloon to a landing in Lake Erie were rescued 18 miles out by the crew of the yacht Helene, who made fast a cable dropped from the basket and towed the bag to shore.

Those aboard the balloon were Dr. C. B. Lagalle, vice-president of the Detroit Balloon Club and three passengers, George Ingram, president of the Ingram Steel Company; R. K. Lee of the Chrysler Corporation and W. J. Habermass of the Goodrich Tire & Rubber Company.

Jailed for 2 Years After Speedy Trial

Portland, Me., Sept. 19—Ernest Kenney, 19-year-old Portland youth convicted by a jury after 10 minutes' deliberation on the charge of robbing Archie C. Miles in Deering Oaks on the night of August 22, following an alleged assault on Miles, was sentenced to serve two to four years in the State prison at Thomaston by Judge Arthur Chapman in the Cumberland County Superior Court.

Society Polo Player Dies of Heart Attack

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—Thomas Le Boutellier 2nd, prominent socially, died of heart disease while playing polo at Meadow Brook Club, Long Island.

He was 51 years old a graduate of Yale, held the European revolver championship and was a member of the American pistol team in the Olympic games.

Predicts Men Will Indulge in Cosmetics

Editor Boston American:

Why shouldn't men use cosmetics?

The time is fast approaching when all men will be compelled to "prink up" to win the women.

Women think that they must do that now to attract and hold the men and they will continue to have a chemical display on their faces for some time to come.

But men will fall for it, too. Look at what the newspapers reveal. Nearly 43 per cent of the new citizens in Boston are women. Men! does this not jar you? Certainly we are fast coming, as men, to the autocracy of the paint box. The superman will henceforth be photographed with a lipstick in his hand. J. C. R.

Sunbaths in Back Yard Are Advocated

Editor Boston American:

Sunbaths are gradually becoming more popular! Here is what a doctor of Greater Boston says: "Rig up an enclosure in your backyard, on the roof or anywhere that privacy insures; strip, have a bowl of water and sponge near, drip the water over you every few minutes or bind a wet towel around your head, forget the world and just smile in the sunlight. The sun is a curative agent."

In Switzerland, Dr. Rollier is advocating the healing value of sunlight. We don't get enough sunlight.

ONE WHO KNOWS.

Women in Fewer Accidents Than Men

Editor Boston American:

Are women drivers of automobiles in more accidents than men drivers? They are not. Figures will prove that there is one woman driver's accident to every 17 men drivers' accidents.

This may answer your correspondent's question about women drivers being in automobile accidents. M. E. W.

Would Ban Smoking in Hub Restaurants

Editor Boston American:

Use your extensive influence to stop smoking in restaurants. Let smokers adjourn to another room after meals for such a pleasure.

I am an inveterate smoker and I am not condemning smoking as a bad habit. What I experienced lately, in a Boston restaurant, was to taste the smoke of a cigarette in my meal. The air in the restaurant was just blue as a result of smoking by men and women. Smoke in another compartment. Don't allow smoking at tables where people are eating. J. L. C.

Suggests Through Way on Common

Editor Boston American:

I suppose when a young woman interests herself in Jam, other than the variety made from strawberries and other fruits, she is stepping out of her line. Yet there is a jam, a traffic jam, now confronting Boston and every other big city of the country.

Although we have had high salaried experts study the problem for years, we still have to huddle together like a flock of sheep at the door of a pen waiting for the shepherd to take down the bar, and then like those sheep we all go madly dashing in different directions, tumbling over each other, and a regular bedlam is the result.

If the city would only go to the expense of erecting archways across the busiest corners, such as Boylston and Washington, building them high enough so that any high truck can pass under them, it would keep foot traffic steadily on the move, and would stop the bad congestion at these points.

Now another suggestion that I would make is the making of a through way across Boston Common, and do away with that big jam at the junction of Tremont and Boylston. MRS. L. F.

Harvard Praised in City Planning Idea

Editor Boston American:

The dawn of a new municipal era is spreading onward like a forest fire, due to the fact that a berth has been created at Harvard University to stimulate city planning.

A "Citizen of No Mean City," we can all feel pride in our city. Radiant and beautiful she sits in her ancient seat by the Atlantic sea board. Peace and prosperity are within her gates. Industry and civic pride characterize her citizens. She stands for education, breadth of vision, freedom of thought and for the principles of liberty, equality and fraternity. But why say more, this will be the keynote for pen and voice next year—1930.

Worries About Donkey Glands in Humans

Editor Boston American:

I read in the papers that scientists have given up monkeying with monkey glands and have transferred their studies to donkey glands in the art of rejuvenating.

Oh, boy, what are we coming to! Here is Dr. Leventis of the American Medical Association rejuvenating his patients with serum drawn from donkeys and claims most satisfactory results.

Opponents of Dr. Voronoff said that monkey glands transplanted to humans would make them climb trees and begin chattering.

Are we now about to have, with donkey glands, a generation of hee-haws, with flapping ears, going around braying for carrots?

Looking for West Point Portraits

Editor Boston American:

Portraits of eight generals are missing from the collection of generals at the United States Military Academy at West Point. They are graduates of this institution and the pictures are wanted for Memorial Hall. These generals fought either in the Mexican and Civil Wars.

Their names are: Gen. Carlos Buell, Samuel R. Curtis, Frederick Steele, William B. Franklin, Nathaniel Lyon, John G. Foster, Darius N. Couch, Gordon Granger. Information should be sent to the academy.

COLLECTOR

Bootlegger Carries Liquor in a Rug

Editor Boston American:

Does prohibition prohibit? That is the rasping question in many minds. Rev. Dr. George A. Gordon, pastor emeritus of the Old South Church, is out with a statement against prohibition, which, to say the least, is hardly convincing from his point of view.

There must be some sort of a compromise about the Volstead Act, and it is bound to come. More are feeling this today than ever before.

We are not getting anywhere with prohibition. Let us be honest. Down in State st., when I was in an office a man came in with a rug under his arm. He placed it on the floor and exclaimed: "This is the finest kind of a rug made" and out rolled two bottles of rye whiskey. Right here in our beloved Boston.

UNSCRAMBLE THESE ANAGRAMBLES

DAILY ANAGRAM PUZZLES

THE game sensation that has swept America. The rules are simple. You are given, for instance, the word "tear" to unscramble with the letter "h." The Anagramble is "heart." Similarly to unscramble the word "link" with "s." The Anagramble is "slink." Remember, you cannot make an Anagramble with a plural—"links" would be wrong. You have to change the complete meaning of the word; "slink" is, therefore, correct. Nor can you make a different tense of a word. For instance, to unscramble "read" with "s" you cannot make it "reads." You must change the complete meaning. The Anagramble, therefore, is "dears."

Now try your hand at these Anagrambles:

(1) DEALS—Unscramble it with a D.
(2) COAST—Unscramble it with a C.
(3) CALVE—Unscramble it with an O.
(4) BARKING—Unscramble it with an E.
(5) NOMAD—Unscramble it with an I.

Yesterday's Answers: 1—Halos with S is Shoals. 2—Place with H is Chapel. 3—Blurt with E is Butler. 4—Breath with L is Blather. 5—Barbs with O is Absorb.

FURNITURE FIRE BLOCKS TRAFFIC

Traffic in Washington st. was tied up for nearly an hour today while firemen fought a blaze in the American Furniture Store, 850 Washington st. Damage amounted to several thousand dollars.

The fire started in a pile of excelsior in the basement of the three-story structure, fire officials declared. The flames worked their way up through the entire building, although most of the damage was confined to the basement.

Pupils in the Boston Continuation School for Girls, 864 Washington st., were undisturbed.

Extract of Dried Hog Relieves Anemia

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 19 (AP)—The Ann Arbor Daily News today says a new treatment for pernicious anemia has been developed by University of Michigan scientists. The treatment consists of using an extract made from dried hog stomach.

It was developed in experiments started last spring at the Thomas Henry Simpson Memorial Institute, founded to find a cure for pernicious anemia. It was developed by Dr. Cyrus C. Sturgis, director of the institute; Dr. Raphael Isaacs, associate director, and Dr. Elwood A. Sharp, director of experimental medicine of Parke, Davis & Co.

Study of patients indicated the blood-building agent in the new substance was more effective by a large percentage than that of liver, recognized for some time as valuable.

Dr. Sturgis said the work had not reached a stage where the extract was available for medical centers, physicians and patients, but that general distribution should soon be possible. He emphasized that it is not a cure, but, like liver and kidney extracts, must be used as long as relief from the disease is desired.

REINSTEIN DEATH SUSPECTS QUIT BOSTON

BOSTON DAY by DAY

By FRED TOYE

ITALIAN-AMERICANS are seething with excitement over a prospective visit by a detachment of Italian cavalry at the coming Boston horse show

For the first time in 25 years, Boston is going to see one of these thrilling shows of its own, to be staged at the Garden. The affair will be from October 30 to November 4.

CREDIT for the idea of bringing the crack Italian Army riders from overseas goes to Giuseppe Guillermin, president of the Boston Banca Commerciale Italiana Trust Company. This genial banker, a comparative new-comer to this city, has made hosts of friends in the business and social life of the community. He comes from London, where he was for a number of years branch representative of the great Italian banking house.

Negotiations for the visit of the cavalry riders and their mounts are being made by President Guillermin through the Italian ambassador at Washington.

INTEREST in horses and horsemanship is greater than it has been for many years, Boston proper will see little of the devotees until the present series of county and agricultural shows and other affairs close. Owners and riders have had busy times the past few wee , what with the Topsfield Fair and the Eastern States Exposition at Springfield treading close upon one another's heels.

Just at present the huntsmen are out at dawn every other day in pursuit of the elusive fox at Myopia. Brockton Fair will have its special appeal the first week in October. Then in hot pursuit come the Willowdale races at the Bradley Palmer estate in Topsfield October 12, and the Norfolk Hunt steeple chase October 19. There will hardly be time for a bowing acquaintance with the bridle path before the Boston horse show opens its doors.

MAJOR JAMES H. APPLETON, master of fox hounds at Myopia, is one of the most ardent horsemen in New England. He is chairman of the racing committee for the Willowdale steeplechase races. Myopia has a large pack this year, comprising 30 pairs, and the major is frequently seen exercising the dogs. He takes his duties seriously, and rarely leaves their morning walk to an attendant.

IT IS A PRETTY sight to watch the departure of the hunt. The start is usually made from the kennels at Warner's, Major Appleton's estate at Ipswich. There are more huntsmen out this year than ever before. A couple of 10-year-old youngsters ride with the best of them. The children are permitted to follow the fox, but are not allowed to share in the drag hunts.

FLORIDA has the fruit fly, Louisiana the boll-weevil and Massachusetts the clammer. To residents along our nearby waterfronts, our local visitant is the worst of the three. Home owners along the North and South Shores in the neighborhood of Boston are on the verge of open warfare with the clammers. The recent lifting of state restrictions upon clam-digging has upset the calm routine of our shore-dwellers' ordinary existence. East Boston, Lynn, Wollaston and other sections have been invaded by commercial diggers.

STATE LAWS stipulate that digging must be done 300 feet beyond the line of mean low tide. In a region like Wollaston, where an ordinary low tide leaves flats for a distance of half a mile or more, oceanward, it is difficult to find the legal limit. The result is that the law is blithely disregarded.

Excited townsmen of Wollaston were prodded to the exploding point last night when a huge truck backed up to the beach, and diggers prepared to load to capacity. Telephones buzzed and sizzled with impromptu neighborhood conferences and with attempts to induce some hardy soul to summon the constabulary.

Police Turn to Quaker State for Clues; Fail to Find Girl Wanted in Case

The investigation of the slaying of Samuel Reinstein, New York white slaver, in the Hotel Huntington, was today concentrated on a hunt for two Pennsylvania men. Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T Doyle announced.

They were seen several times in conversation with Reinstein and others in the South End, prior to Friday night, when the racketeer was shot down from behind.

The car in which they were seen, Doyle has learned, was registered to Harry Malaga of Washington boulevard, Easton, Pa., but Pennsylvania authorities say the registration should be from Bethlehem, Pa.

EIGHT RESORTS CLOSED.

This checks with a statement in one of the letters found in Reinstein's effects, in which his brother Louis wrote:

"Frankie, the Barber, has a letter for you. It is postmarked from Bethlehem, Penn."

The police also found six Pennsylvania telephone numbers and Bethlehem and Northampton, Pa., addresses.

In a tour of the South End, Doyle and his investigators found eight disorderly houses closed and locked, with uniformed police at each.

They eventually found two white slavers they sought, and obtained admissions they had talked with the Pennsylvania men, whose names they denied knowing.

"BETTY" STILL SOUGHT.

In the meantime the search for "Betty," a Roxbury girl wanted for questioning concerning contacts Reinstein made in this city, was extended to New York. The girl could not be found at her home.

Dist. Atty. William J. Foley is confident she can give valuable information regarding the man who introduced Reinstein to his slayers.

Want Racing Experts Off Cutters in Race

Appeals were made to the regatta committee of the South Boston Yacht Club today to bar racing experts from the crews of the old-time cutters, Monarch and Lavon S. Ames, in their cruising men's race, scheduled for Saturday afternoon.

The committee was urged to limit both "ships" to bonafide cruising crews regularly sailing on the boats. Other protests were expected, so intense is the rivalry between the two camps which have evenly divided the club.

Capt. John Knight of Monarch had a lengthy council of war aboard ship over the refusal of the race committee to permit him to borrow a huge spinnaker, balloon headsails, and a whopping big club topsail from other old time craft in the fleet.

CHALLENGE ACCEPTED

Both "ships" were oldtimers before the war. They are somewhat similar in appearance, both clipper bowed, heavy boats, both cutter rigged.

The race Saturday is the outcome of the Chowder race last Sunday. In that event the boats were started separately, the greater the allowance the earlier the start, with the scratch boats starting last.

In that race Monarch was started first. It finished last. The Indian class craft started last and finished in first place. This led to the argument that, the handicapping was all wet, and that Monarch made a lot better race than the results showed.

Out of the argument came the suggestion for a special race for Monarch, and Lavon S. Ames, which did not start Sunday because the wind was too light, was picked to match the Monarch. The "cruising" sailors of the club, as opposed to the "racing" men, seized on the idea, and have made the clubhouse a place of dissension since.

ALL SET FOR RACE

Jim Norris, "mastheadman" on the Lavon S. Ames, put that cutter on the blocks for a thorough overhaul, top and bottom, and used up all Capt. Freddie Grosse's supply of wet-and-dry sandpaper smoothing off every unbody.

When it was suggested to Capt Knight of Monarch to haul out he allowed Monarch must be fairly clean underneath, because he scraped her on both sides, most thoroughly, last Sunday, during the Chowder race, against rocks on Long Island shore.

Both he and Capt. Herbie Arvidson, Indian class ace, in Monarch afterward, figure that the wind will be light Saturday and Monarch will be able easily to overcome any slick bottom advantage Norris has secured for Lavon S. Ames.

Dismiss Petition for Funeral Home

The petition of Horace R. Crane to construct a funeral home at Melville ave., Dorchester, was turned down by the board of appeal of the building department at City Hall after a vigorous protest by residents of that section, headed by Attorneys John P. Feeney and William Flaherty.

The petitioner asked that the board of appeal change the application of the zoning law to permit the erection of a funeral home.

Attorney Flaherty, a resident of the street, representing his sister, and about 30 other property owners protested the invasion of the home on the site of one of Dorchester's show places. Feeney took the same stand and was supported by the Dorchester Improvement Association.

Woburn Boy Held for Trial as Slayer of His Own Father

ACCUSED OF KILLING DAD IN QUARREL

Youth Surrenders Self to the Police; Says He Acted in Defense of Mother

George S. McGourty, 20, of Woburn, today shot and killed his father, Owen J. McGourty, as the climax to a drunken attack made by the elder McGourty on his wife, according to the police.

Following the shooting, young McGourty left the little home in Main st. and walked until he met Patrolman Arthur A. Fay: "I have just shot my father," he calmly informed the policeman.

Fay took the youth to Woburn police headquarters, where he surrendered a .38-caliber revolver, from which he had fired two bullets into his father's body, as the elder McGourty, he said, was choking his wife.

Policemen were dispatched to the McGourty home, and found the body of the father lying in a pool of blood across the threshold of the living room. There was a bullet wound in his chest, and another in his abdomen.

McGourty was rushed to Choate Memorial Hospital, but was pronounced dead on arrival. He did not regain consciousness after the shooting.

Young McGourty, through counsel, pleaded not guilty when arraigned on a murder charge in Woburn District Court.

Judge John G. Maguire granted a continuance of one week and ordered the youth held without bail at the East Cambridge jail.

The boy defendant appeared self-collected and unruffled in the courtroom. He was dressed in a well-pressed light brown suit, had good color in his cheeks, and looked refreshed and well groomed. His blond hair was slicked back carefully.

He was represented by Attorney James E. Hershey of Woburn, who entered the not guilty plea and waived reading of the complaint. None of the youth's relatives were present.

The tragedy, police were informed, climaxed a long series of quarrels between the father, Owen J. McGourty, and his wife, Mrs. McGourty told investigators that she had been maltreated by her husband on numerous occasions.

A short time before the shooting, she said, she returned from a theater, where she had witnessed the film "The Greene Murder Case." Her husband, she said, was intoxicated and accused her of having been out with another man.

He followed this accusation by grasping her by the throat, she said, and attempting to choke her. At this point the son George entered the room and interceded, telling the father to leave the room and stop fighting. George then turned to his mother, she said, and demanded: "How long are you going to stand for this treatment."

His words, apparently, angered the elder McGourty, according to Mrs McGourty, and he directed his attack against George, who fought himself loose and left the room. The youth went to his bedroom, Mrs. McGourty told police, and procured a gun.

Returning to the living room a few minutes later, he brandished the weapon at his father and declared: "If you don't leave my mother alone you'll get it."

Several hours before the shooting, police had been called to the McGourty home by another son, Owen J., Jr., who complained that his father was intoxicated and raising a disturbance.

PASTOR FREED IN AUTO DEATH

Rev. Alexander Syski, Hyde Park pastor, charged with manslaughter and reckless driving in connection with the death of Patrolman John I. Jackson of the West Roxbury police, was found not guilty today by Judge Allen of West Roxbury court.

The accused priest was given a hearing before Judge Allen a week ago. The judge deferred judgment until he could visit the scene of the accident, Hyde Park ave. and Walk Hill st., West Roxbury.

He exonerated the defendant today, declaring that the evidence supported Fr. Syski's story to the effect that the police officer jumped from a street car against the side of his machine. It was not a regular car stop, the court found, and the patrolman had dropped off to reach a signal box.

Beats Jury to Their Verdict—or Did He?

At practically the same moment that a jury in the Middlesex Superior Criminal Court at East Cambridge signalled that it had decided his fate on a serious charge, Herbert MacKenzie of Glenndale, entered a plea of guilty and created an unusual situation, for whatever verdict the jury reached will never be known, at least officially.

MacKenzie went to trial charged with stacking Grace L. Wheeler, a child, at Stowe, September 11. At the time, he was without a lawyer. The government put in its case, and the jury took it for deliberation

The defendant's lawyer appeared, discussed the case with him and advised the defendant to plead guilty. So MacKenzie entered his plea and just as the clerk started to ask the judge if he wished to recall the jury, the talesmen rang their bell notifying the court they had reached a verdict. It couldn't have been done better with a rehearsal.

When the jurymen had taken their posts, Judge Fosdick announced that the defendant had just pleaded guilty, and accordingly he had decided to take the case from them.

The case was continued to October 14 for sentence

WOMAN GIVEN FIVE YEARS

A sentence of five years and one day at the Reformatory for Women was imposed by Judge Gibbs in superior criminal court upon Mrs. Anna C. Staples of 23 West Springfield st., who formerly boarded four adults and 12 children in seven rooms in a house in Julian st., Roxbury.

A short time before sentence was imposed, the jury which heard the trial had returned verdicts of guilty on charges of manslaughter, maintaining a lodging house without a license, and assault and battery upon John Fitzpatrick, four years old. The jury found that the little boy died as a result of beatings administered by Mrs. Staples.

On the manslaughter charge Mrs. Staples was sentenced to the reformatory. The other two counts against her were placed on file

Mrs. Staples' conviction culminated an investigation of four months into the death of the little boy.

When the jury returned its verdict and the sentence was passed, Mrs. Staples, a woman weighing more than 300 pounds, fainted and had to be carried to the detention room by four court officers

COUPLE RENEW COURT FIGHT

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Robbins of Arlington, who have been before the Middlesex courts on various occasions because of domestic difficulties, were back again today before Judge Charles N Harris in the probate session.

Mrs. Robbins said that on May 6 she was operated on for appendicitis and the $20 per week allowed her is not sufficient to meet the bill of some $600

Judge Harris took the case under consideration.

The couple had their first trouble over a cook, whom Mrs. Robbins fired and her husband hired again. Mrs. Robbins at that time was granted a decree allowing her to live apart from her husband on justifiable grounds. They continued, however, to live in the same house.

BAY STATE GIRL WEDS PRINCE IN PARIS

Miss Catherine Green of Middleton Is Now the Princess Arapoff of Russia

The former Miss Catherine Green of Middleton is the Princess Arapoff of Paris and Moscow now.

Cable dispatches today brought word that the Bay State girl and her titled husband were on their way to the Black Forest of Germany on an automobile honeymoon trip. They were married in the historic church of the Madeline at Paris.

The romance of the Russian prince and the small-town miss from Massachusetts began when Catherine Green, a Radcliffe graduate of last year, went to the Sorbonne to continue her studies.

At Paris, in a setting of European culture and sophistication, she met Alexis Arapoff, son of one of the late Czar's favorite nobles. The father died as a general commanding Russian troops on the eastern front. Alexis and his mother fled from the Bolsheviks. On his mother's side, the young prince is a Tolstoy. His artistic instincts found outlet at Paris, and when he met Miss Green he was already on the high road to success as a painter.

An engagement followed. Mrs. Richard Thomas Green of Middleton, the girl's mother, gave her consent. Prince Arapoff's mother was also satisfied. The wedding was attended by Paris notables and by relatives from both sides of the Atlantic. Prince and Princess Arapoff will live at Paris

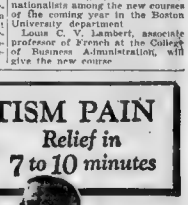
RHEUMATISM PAIN NEEDLESS

Relief in 7 to 10 minutes



Peter P. Montini 122 Perry Street, Everett, Mass., says: "I suffered from a fall in the winter of 1925, which resulted in a severe rheumatic fever attack. My right arm was nearly useless. I tried various kinds of liniments and ointments, also steam baths, but nothing seemed to help me. Your MUSCLETONE was recommended and after using one-half bottle, I could use my arm quite freely, and was able to go back where I had not been able to do so for seven months. The pain has left me completely, and your remedy did all that you claim for it. I have been in business at the same address for 32 years and am a Civil War Veteran, 85 years of age. I am glad to recommend your MUSCLETONE to all sufferers of rheumatic pains, and also anyone. Your MUSCLETONE is really a God send to me.

I received your bottle of MUSCLETONE in due time, and please send me two more bottles at the same way. I find it an excellent remedy for sore and stiff muscles. Your remedy is really a God send to me. All my own and friends' almost immediately when I applied your MUSCLETONE. Charles F. Clark, Leeds, Mass.

Do you honestly want complete and lasting relief from the pains of rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica or neuralgia? Science has given these troubles needless. A new way has been found to end muscular agony and distress so amazingly speedy that it seems almost miraculous. Pain actually stops in 7 to 10 minutes and may be forgotten. Chronic cases and those unusually severe will of course require continued treatment for a while. This would be only natural. Yet often less than a single bottle is enough for complete relief even in most severe conditions of long standing.

This new discovery is known as MUSCLETONE. It was found by Dr. Chapin, a famous physician of New York. Now almost a million people have used the MUSCLETONE treatment. They learned of it entirely by word of mouth recommendation.

The amazing success of MUSCLETONE is due to the fact that it applies medicine to the point of injunction. It neutralizes accumulated toxins, absorbs them and relieves congested tissues. Pain goes, joints become limber. Yet you take no violent drugs to upset the stomach. Nothing is internally taken. MUSCLETONE is applied directly to the part affected. Yet it is not a liniment, a "body-rub" or a counter-irritant. It couldn't irritate a baby's skin, so bland and cool and soothing is it. It would seem that all old theories of ending rheumatism pains are now made obsolete.

We urge only that you make this test. MUSCLETONE is now obtainable at any drug store. Buy it today. Use one-half the bottle and if you are not amazed return the remaining half to the druggist and he will refund your money. The price is $1.00.

HOOVER'S SON COMES TO HARVARD CLAD IN BAGGY TWEEDS

REGISTERS AS FRESHMAN AT CAMBRIDGE

Advent Is Unheralded at University; Poses for Cameras and "Talkies"

Elsewhere in the wide world Allan Hoover may be the President's son, but at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration today he was only one more freshman—once more a freshman.

In a battered suit of tweeds which hadn't apparently seen a tailor in weeks and weeks and weeks, young Hoover, Leland Stanford graduate, trudged with his future classmates up the stairs of the Baker Memorial Library to the registration desk in the administration office.

If the Hoover name meant anything to the attendant in charge, that gentleman didn't betray it. He continued to argue with a friend as to the likelihood of Harvard winning a football game or two in the season of 1929.

ALONE AND UNHERALDED.

Alone and unheralded, Herbert Hoover's boy strolled back down through the library's lobby. Outside were all the newspapermen and movie reel men and sound picture men in the world—or almost all.

They were expecting somebody, but it didn't seem to be the youth in the brown tweeds. The latter had plenty of his father in him, however. He figured on facing an ordeal and getting it over with.

"I'm Allan Hoover," he said quietly.

The camera man stared, opening his mouth for an incredulous wise-crack. Something about the tell, black-haired freshman's level gaze gave him pause.

POSED FOR CAMERAMEN

He turned to a veteran movie reel man.

"Let's talk to this bird," he suggested.

It wasn't necessary. It wasn't even possible.

Publicity had caught up with Allan Hoover again.

He did, however, oblige—ably for photographers. He spoke a conventional greeting or two for the "talkies." That was all.

So the President's son became a freshman again by the simple device of walking off to his room, Hollon hall, the dormitory named for Andrew J. Mellon, secretary of the treasury in his father's cabinet.

Tomorrow, like any other dutiful freshman male, he will be hustling to classes, listening to lectures on marketing, finance and industrial management. And if he eats he'll hear from the dean—if not from dad.

Directs Her Own Rescue

Miss Bessie Clancy, 26, of Dorchester, was seriously injured when pinned under a trolley car that struck her at Upham's Corner, but calmly directed the work of the men who were jacking up the car to rescue her.

Pinned Under Trolley, Girl Directs Rescue

Miss Bessie Clancy, 26, of Eastman st., Dorchester, was resting comfortably on a City Hospital cot today while her courage in directing rescuers who battled to release her from beneath the forward end of a street car on Columbia rd. was being lauded.

While firemen and police worked frantically to release her, Miss Clancy, besides directing the work of rescue, identified herself before she became unconscious.

At City Hospital she was found to have internal injuries and a broken leg.

Miss Clancy was crossing Columbia rd. when a one-man car operated by John Fahey of Centre st., Dorchester, struck her and dragged her several yards. Engine 21 and Ladder 20 were called and work was started to jack the forward end.

Miss Clancy although in great pain was perfectly calm and explained to her rescuers the position she was in. Her last words were her name and address.

CATCH 20 TONS OF MACKEREL IN 3½ HOURS

And That Includes the Time It Took to Go From Boston and Return

Capt. Philip Curcuru and his crew of 10, aboard the fishing schooner, Bethulia, today claimed the quick-catch, quick-trip record of the Boston fleet.

The Bethulia was back at the fish pier three and one-half hours from the time she started out. Meanwhile she had caught a full load of 40,000 pounds of mackerel, fishing just off Boston Light.

Moderate catches were reported at the fish pier today by fishing schooners which brought in mackerel blinks selling for 6 to 8¼ cents. Few large mackerel have been landed in Boston during the past few days.

Today's arrivals of 233,000 pounds of blinks were from nine schooners which made trips to Boston bay, mostly to points between Cape Cod and Seguin.

Steamer Georgetown of the ground fishing fleet at Georges banks came in with 81,000 pounds of haddock, steamer Ripple with 75,000 pounds, steamer Tide with 55,000 pounds, steamer Surf with 45,000 pounds, and the steamer Shawmut with 70,000 pounds. Thousands of pounds of cod were also reported.

Prices paid for large cod were from 8 to 9½; market cod, 6 to 8½; haddock, 6 to 6½; pollock and hake, 4 to 4½; lemon and gray sole, 11 to 12, and flounders of the black back and yellow tail variety were sold at from 7 to 8 cents a pound.

FIRE DRIVES 50 FROM HOTEL

Fire in the Central Hotel on Green st., West End, today drove fifty roomers to the street and caused damage estimated at $500. The hotel occupies four upper stories. On the ground floor are several stores.

The fire was discovered by Arthur Warren, night clerk, who, upon opening a door leading into the hallway, was met by a blast of flames and smoke. He sounded the alarm.

Most of those driven to the street were in their night clothing. Several were taken to their lodgers which were put up on the Green st. side of the hotel.

MAIL BRIDE ON HOME 'STRIKE'

Dominic Altieri's bride of a few weeks, a girl he married in Italy after a mail courtship and brought to Brockton a week ago, has left him and gone to East Boston where she had relatives, according to a story told the police.

Several months ago Dominic announced that he could not find a girl here to suit him. After a brief mail courtship Dominic came home with his bride from Italy and they set up housekeeping on Skinner st.

Soon after their arrival Mrs. Altieri said she did not like Brockton, but she was willing to live with her husband in East Boston.

Old Boston in Pictures—No. 60

THIS is not a pre-historic monster, but merely "Cleopatra's Barge," a sleigh that was quite popular in Boston in the winters around 1852. Gay parties of men and women used the barge for winter outings and excursions to neighboring towns for supper and dancing. FITZ MARRIED FORTY YEARS

Ex-Mayor and Mrs. John F Fitzgerald of Boston observed the 40th anniversary of their wedding at West Hyannisport.

After a dinner party in their summer home, when their 10 grandchildren and a few friends were present, the day was much like others of the vacation. The wedding, whose anniversary brought many congratulations and good wishes, took place at Concord in 1889. Rev. John Crowe officiated.

Fitzgerald said all had passed a most happy day and that they were going to town refreshed by the season at the shore and with happy memories.

Customs Officers Must Board Planes

The regular force of boarding officers has been increased by newly appointed deputy collectors who may be called on in emergency or when the regular boarding officers are away. The appointees are F. F. Rhodes, J. J. O'Keefe, J. Mulkern, E. M. Blekmore, F. H. Richardson, E. V. McMahon.

Tiny Girl Boosts Her Chum to Box for False Alarm

Two little girls, each of them too small to reach the fire box alone, were discovered to be responsible for the sounding of a false alarm from box 4115, Park and Henley sts., Charlestown.

As a result, the youngsters, one 8, and the other 9, may be summoned to court with their parents. Police learned that the eight-year-old girl was lifted up to the fire box by her chum.

23,394 Health Visits Made in August

That Boston mothers are having more medical and nursing care, and therefore healthier babies, is revealed by the monthly report for August of "the hospital without walls," the Community Health Association.

Twenty-three thousand three hundred and ninety-four visits to nearly 6000 patients were made in August throughout the 14 local districts. This is an increase of four per cent over last year, which is largely accounted for by the growing maternity service. Fields Corner, Hyde Park, Jamaica Plain, Roxbury, South Boston and the South End especially, had an active delivery service.

KIDNAPED GIRL FOUND, CRYING

While the South End was being searched section by section, Elizabeth Adams, five, of Briggs st., kidnaped yesterday on her way home from school, was found today on an Oneida st. doorstep crying.

The little girl, who had been left by a man in the care of Mrs. Mary Moses of Oneida sts., was found by Patrolman Michael O'Leary of Division 5, and returned to her distracted parents.

She was first taken to Station 5, with Mrs. Moses, by Patrolman O'Leary, and Mrs. Adams was sent for. There was a joyful reunion of mother and daughter and then John Brown, arrested today on suspicion as the kidnaper, was brought up from a cell.

Mrs. Moses immediately identified him as the man who had left Elizabeth with her with the explanation he wished to visit his wife in a hospital.

Brown walked over to Elizabeth and placing his arm about her shoulder greeted her. He was then locked up.

At the request of Capt. John Mullen of Division 5 Elizabeth was examined by three physicians at City Hospital, who found that no harm had come to her as a result of her experience.

He proposes to warn the owners of the unlicensed dogs just once more to pay the nominal fee for registration, after that, he says, the owners will be haled into court. The fine for having an unlicensed dog in Revere is $20.

$100,000 More for Jack Sharkey in Fine Spot Victory Means Millions

REAL SHARKEY MUST SHOW THIS TIME

SQUIRE SHARKEY of Newton is putting on the final touches for another of his semi-annual $100,000 ring wars. The Squire, opportunist and child of fortune, will be trying with everything he has when he waltzes in after Tommy Loughran a week from this evening.

He must win this once, or back out of the picture. The need and desire for money and comfort, which started the sailor up toward the heights, has passed. Jack collected plenty and had sense enough to invest it shrewdly. With what he gets out of next week's skirmish, he's set for life.

NICK FLATLEY

But he has the title to clutch now. If he licks the clever Tommy he'll be the heavyweight champion, whatever a few commissions may have to say. He will be in line for his biggest money shot down in Miami in February. He can gather in those perquisites that go with the heavy crown.

Sharkey can fight when he feels like it. On the way up, he looked a real champion until he had knocked aside the toughest contenders. Then he started to coast. He tried to outsmart his way through scraps with Heeney and Risko, and got the worst of the decisions.

He didn't train properly for Dempsey, and was licked. But he gave the Tiger quite a pasting before the old steam ran out. The Squire has readied himself for Loughran, and he has nothing else but the desire. Conditions being what they are, he should show the boys something next week—a fifteen round edition of the real warrior that flashed startlingly against Maloney, Delaney and Dempsey.

This and That

First tee stories are popular just now. Bird takes three swipes and succeeds in moving the ball about 10 feet. Asks partner for advice. "Looks like," chirped the pard, "you'll have to punt."

Might be a good idea if the city banned the strange interludes on the main traffic arteries.

N. B. A. ousts Mickey Walker, who can fight, and cheers for Andre Routis, who can't. Oh well, they meet next year in Quebec, where the stuff is better.

Spats will be worn quite generally this fall, even in Revere and South Boston.

Sticks don't seem to grow popular, though P. Moran, the ring judge wears one, but has a broken ankle as an excuse.

Personalities

The most consistent golfer is Frank Sibley, the writer. He hasn't cracked 100 in almost that many years.

Carroll Getchell is through with the concrete stands and will now turn his attention to the concrete grads.

Joe McKenney is building an iron man team. That will bring the iron men through the gate.

Al Sheehan knows more theatrical satellites than any other mortal. And what he knows.

Royal Brown, author, still whizzes his three speedboats along the river at Humarock. And will until snow flies.

Tommy Woods, former All-American star, drifts in. The football season brings 'em all back.

Did You Know?

That a pari-mutuel race track in Boston would make 20,000 happy every day. So there isn't one.

That Bushy Graham has snared more than $200,000 in four years of boxing. And supports a family numbering 17.

Cleveland Here for Series With Sox

RESPITE FOR HARVARD VARSITY

THE entire first squad of Coach Arnold Horween's grid candidates were given their first respite today after grinding along for three days of preliminary training.

No practice was held in the forenoon today as the Cantabrigian mentors felt that a short lay up would do their weary charges more good than another day's work.

It is generally felt that this vacation is only the lull before the storm. In the afternoon the boys are scheduled to square away on heavy duty work.

A charging machine weighing about a half ton was rolled onto the field this morning and the guards will shoulder their way over many miles of field massaging before the knock-off whistle is blown.

SOFT FOR COACH

The machine is equipped with a bench upon which assistant coach Johnnie Donovan sits and directs the rolling. The presence of Coach Donovan adds something like 230 pounds to the occasion.

So far the squad has had nothing harder than grass drills, light charging, and some barefoot dancing on the green. These were pleasant while they lasted, but now the work of dirt drinking has begun in earnest. Pads which have not been worn up to now were donned today when Duke Dunn led the squad through a long drill of dummy tackling.

SCRIMMAGE PLANNED

The four elevens which were made up from the first squad, yesterday, are working hard towards the scrimmaging which will take place the last of the week if weather permits.

Of these, the eleven quarterbacked by Elliot Putnam, looks the best, by far. Most of the team are lettermen, with two or more years of varsity experience.

The line men, consisting of Douglas and O'Connell at ends, Capt. Jim Barrett and Foster Davis, tackles, and the Ticknor brothers with John Trainer, as the center trio, were all starters in the Yale game last year.

The backfield is filled out by Sam Batchelder, Wallis Harper and Art Huguley. These are expected to show up as heavy scorers when the teams get down to scrimmaging at the end of the week.

Frank Winston, a halfback; Henry Kyhoff, and Tom Frazier were the latest to draw equipment today. Frazier's home is in Honolulu, and he came half-way round the world to join the practice. All three were banned over to Jimmie Knox, who has charge of the second team.

FOUR REASONS WHY CUBS WON PENNANT

Stevenson Hornsby Wilson Cuyler

Four members of the Chicago Cubs are shown examining their bludgeons before stepping to the plate. And they will be four reasons why the Athletics won't walk off with the World Series.

ED MORRIS TO HURL OPENER

CLEVELAND, the season's most surprising ball club, opens a series with the Red Sox, this p. m.

It is the last of the Western teams to visit these parts this campaign, and is down to play four games on four successive afternoons at the Fens.

The Indians come here in third place. They hope to be very close to second when they leave. No matter how they fare here, they are virtually certain to finish no lower than fourth.

Before the start of the race, the betting was about 50 to 1 that they would never see the first division and about even money that they would end up in the cellar.

THERE was little to enthuse over in any of the games in the recent series between the Red Sox and White Sox, because only the former was trying very hard to win.

In the coming engagement, though, there ought to be plenty of thrills with the natives trying to make up the three games that separate them from seventh place and the visitors battling to gain on the Yanks and leave off the Browns, who trail them by only two games.

Ed. Morris will hurl the first game for the Carrigans. The native ace was scheduled to go after his fifteenth victory of the season in the final game of the Chicago series but he didn't want it said that he gained it at the expense of a club that doesn't care whether it wins or loses. So he persuaded Manager Carrigan to save him for

VARIED DRILLS AT HANOVER

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 19—Now that the classes have begun, Coach Cannell has cut down the daily practice of the Dartmouth eleven to one afternoon session.

Drill in drop-kicking was under the direction of Mal Merritt, line charging under the supervision of Swede Youngstrom, and forward passing under Coaches Cannell and Hagenbuckle.

Jeremiah, Harvey, Longnecker and Wolff showed up well drop kicking, while Roland Booma practiced off in a solitary corner where his injured knee could be kept from further injury.

Though there is little hope for Booma this fall, he still persists in turning out for the daily practice.

In a short but rough scrimmage, Team A scored a goal against Team B. The second team retaliated, however, when Bill Morton quarterback, booted a pretty drop kick from the 30-yard line.

Marston called the signals for the first team, with Shep Wolff, Bill McCall and Hank Johnson making up the rest of the backfield. Booma and Sullivan held down the wing positions, Andres at center, Armstrong and Barber at tackle, and Mims and Pyles at guard.

YALE IN FIRST SCRIMMAGE

New Haven, Sept. 19—Yale's football squad held its first scrimmage, the first team being pitted against the second.

There was no attempt at scoring and the scrimmage lasted a half hour.

A "blue" or varsity squad of 28 players, 17 of whom are "Y" men, was formed and Head Coach M. A. Stevens announced the names of the members as follows:

Capt. Greene, Miller, Palmer, McEwen, Ladd, Austin, R. Hall, Hawley, Uihlein, Taylor, Hickok, Wilson, Marting, Tyson, Snead, Loeser, Booth, Stewart, Munn, Strange, A. Hall, Godman, Bachman, Ferris, Betner, Walker, Vincent and Foran.

Before selecting the "blue" squad, Coach Stevens put the candidates through the most strenuous work he has assigned since practice began.

Previous to the scrimmage there was some bull pen work, live tackling, blocking, kicking and passing.

A short scrimmage will be held today.

M'Kenney Lets Axe Fall Very Gently

ONE reason why Joe McKenney, young football coach at Boston College is so popular with his squad and with all connected with football, is that he has done away with the keen-edged guillotine in chopping his outfit down to sizeable proportions.

When weeding time comes McKenney doesn't drag out the axe and let it fall with utter abandon, thus ruining the grid ambitions of from 20 to 30 young men.

McKenney goes about this none too gentle task with much diplomacy. Joe realizes that a fellow's gridiron hopes and career can be ruined by such an act and also knows that there are good little men as well as big ones.

As a rule, it has been customary at B. C. for the football squad to report at the locker room on a day of practice and find a list posted with the names of the undesirables missing.

That constituted a cut. McKenney drops a few at a time. He notifies each one in a gentle way and encourages them to put on a little weight, or to alter their faults, and try again.

A few of the familiar faces have been absent from the squad at the Heights. And before the season is ready to start, a week from Saturday, there'll be many more among the missing. McKenney is slicing his squad down with plenty of precaution and in this way getting the boys to like it.

Joe intends to make an extra large slice before this week is out. There may be a dozen gridders dropped. But they won't feel hurt when they turn in their uniforms for McKenney takes care of each one individually.

If they feel they can do better they're welcome to keep their suits and to try again.

Every member of the Boston College squad has had a chance to work out in the scrimmage and the B. C. coach knows what every one of his 60 odd candidates are capable of.

McKenney applies the same discretion in the case of injuries. If a boy is hurt in a scrimmage McKenney doesn't call for a substitute and let the stretcher-bearer lug off the corpse. He helps the trainers to fix up the injuries and sends them off with a slap on the back.

ROSLINDALE TIES UP SERIES

Frank Milliken came into Twilight league Little World's Series prominence at Fenway Park when he gave the rival Quincy batters only four hits and helped Roslindale to climb into a three-all tie in the series with a 5-to-0 victory.

The final game in this best four out of seven game tussle will be staged at Fore River Field, Quincy, on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Milliken was shooting his stuff in prettily and allowed only two hits in the second, one in the fifth and one in the sixth.

Ed Mullowney, the big fellow on the Quincy mound, was not so successful, as a total of nine hits one a triple by Murphy, forced him to lose his first game in the series.

Feather Champ in Shape for Title War in Hartford

Hartford, Ct., Sept. 19 (AP)—Andre Routis, world's champion featherweight, who meets Bat Battalino next Monday night for the 126-pound title, visited here from his training camp at Holyoke, Mass.

He remained long enough to have his picture taken by news syndicate photographers. Routis appeared in great shape and down almost to the 126 pounds he expects to make on the night of the title bout.

He said he would round up his training Saturday with gymnasium work and then rest on Sunday.

No radio broadcasting of the fight will be allowed, Promoter Ed Hurley announced. He has been approached by several companies for the right, he said, but will not permit the bout to go on the air.

Graham Must Beat Martin or Lose Title Chance

UTICA BOXER IS SEEKING 3 CROWNS

BUSHY GRAHAM regards his bout with Andy Martin at the Boston Garden tomorrow night as the most important bout of his career. Unless he wins from Martin, his campaign to annex the featherweight crown will be halted.

Graham has the greatest of confidence in his own punching ability and he hopes to score a knockout over the New England featherweight champion.

The Utica buzz-saw, as Graham is known in ring parlance, will step through another brisk training session today at Kaley & Hayes' gym. He impressed those who saw him in training with his speed and ability to punch from any angle.

Graham moves around the ring like a ghost, yet he punches like a middleweight and he has already scored more knockouts than most little men of the ring ever have to register.

He is regarded as one of the best right-hand punchers in the game today and Hub fans are certain to witness plenty of thrills when he cuts loose against Martin.

The little bantamweight king anticipates holding three world titles before the close of the winter. He expects to dethrone both Andre Routis of France, featherweight titleholder, and Tod Morgan, junior lightweight king.

One of the best preliminary cards of the year will support the feature bout, with Eddie "Newsboy" Curry of the West End meeting Steve Smith of Bridgeport in the 10-round semifinal.

In an eight-rounder, Larry Brignola of Cambridge opposes Victor Llvan, middleweight champion of Italy, while a six-rounder between Johnny Gonzales of Los Angeles and Jimmy Brisco of Beachmont is certain to be a thriller.

In addition, there will be three four-round bouts.

SHUCCO TO BOX MICKEY SEARS

Tony Shucco will make his bid for fame in the eight-round semifinal bout to the Rawson-Mills battle at the Arena next Monday when he meets Mickey Sears of East Boston, former welterweight champion of Rhode Island. Shucco, a North End Italian, won 90 out of 98 bouts as an amateur.

As a pro, he has won 24 fights out of 24.

Two heavyweight bouts will be among the four-round preliminaries. In one of them, Tom McNeeley of Cambridge, former New England amateur heavyweight champion, will meet the hard-hitting Dan Reagan of Gardner, and in another, Jack Moulton of Roxbury will meet Jerry Brandt of Medford.

Fields-Jones to War

San Francisco, Sept. 19 (INS)—Jackie Fields will meet Gorilla Jones here October 21, it was definitely announced today by managers of the two boxers. The bout was postponed from September 23 because of Fields' infected left arm.

Golf Champ Gives Wind Play Advice

By HORTON SMITH

U. S. North and South, and French Professional Champion

EVER since my experience over those windy links of Scotland and England with the U. S. Ryder Cup team last spring, many have asked me to describe how I think golf ought to be played when stiff breezes prevail.

Accordingly, I have prepared some notes on that phase of the game, based on my own troubles and on what such a master of "wind play" as Walter Hagen has taught me during our months of close association.

The difficulties of playing golf in a strong wind provide one exceedingly knotty problem—the shot which has to be played when the breeze is coming from over the left shoulder.

This means that the wind blows diagonally across the fairway—against the intended line of flight. Described more simply, it is the breeze that accentuates a slice!

In the first place he has no idea how powerful a factor he has to overcome. He begins to appreciate its significance only after he has seen two or three slightly cut shots career madly away to the right.

I HAVE been interested, and, on some occasions, not a little amused, in watching the efforts of the novice under these conditions. His first instinct is to endeavor to stand in such a position that the ball shall start away in its flight more to the left. Thus he imagines it will be brought back to the correct line as the wind asserts its powerful left-to-right influence.

Though this is a laudable intention, the result is not always in accordance with the anticipation.

Often a more colossal slice than before is the outcome. This is because the novice has only made his stances more "open," and not actually aimed more to the left at all.

The more open the stance—other things being equal—the greater will be the degree of slice production. The novice is obviously mystified at this unexpected turn of events, and quickly flies to a second "remedy." This is no more successful than the first.

HE tries to hold the ball up into the wind by turning the right wrist over at the moment of impact—the intention being that the face of the clubhead shall come down on the ball more "turned in" than usual.

An expedient of this kind is unwarrantably dangerous even when attempted by the experienced player. When indulged in by the beginner, disaster is almost sure to result.

Instead of getting the much-to-be-desired left-to-right "drift" on the ball, its turns the face over a trifle too much, and either half tops or else completely smothers the shot.

Two or three of these humiliating efforts soon reduce the novice to a greater condition of perplexity than ever.

To be perfectly frank, he does not know what to do, and resigns himself to the "I-cannot-play-to-day" spirit.

BROWN VARSITY BEATS SCRUBS

Providence, R. I, Sept. 19—The Brown varsity defeated the seconds, 7 to 6, in the first scrimmage of the year, with Joe Mahood, Lee Marshall and F. D. Gurll, showing to advantage for the backs.

C. H. Edwards, veteran halfback, and John Horton, center on the varsity, received injuries that will keep them out of the work temporarily.

Mahood and Gurll scored for the seconds and varsity with 15-yard runs around the ends and Gurll added the extra point.

The varsity lined up as follows: Johnson and Munroe on the ends; Richardson and Schein, tackles; Munson and Wentworth, guards; Horton, center; Edwards and Hemingway, halfbacks and Marshall, fullback.

W. L. Fogarty, regular backfield star, is confined to his room with an attack of grippe, and Andy Rotelli, new comer to the squad, who was counted as a backfield possibility, is being confined at home with a sprained back, received before he returned to the fall camp.

Sharkey Tells Why He's Sure of Victory

By JACK SHARKEY

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., Sept. 19—Boxers as well as army generals must make their battle plans before they sweep into action.

Since establishing my training camp here, I have been perfecting the program which I believe will enable me to knock out Tommy Loughran when we battle at the Yankee Stadium on September 26.

One cannot fight any two men the same way. It is necessary to take into consideration the style of an opponent I have seen Tommy Loughran in most of his important bouts during the past two years. I saw him box Ernie Schaaf at the Boston Garden a few months ago and so know just how he is battling.

Jack Sharkey

Loughran is a straight-up boxer who relies upon his fast left hand to wreck the hopes of his rival in his recent bouts, he has also been calling a right hand sock into play a great deal.

I will match my left hand with Loughran. Tommy will find that my left shoots as straight and true as his, while he will also discover that my left hand has kayo sock concealed in it.

MY right hand is better than Loughran's. It was right hand wallops which knocked out Jim Maloney, Jack Delaney and McTigue and which had Jack Dempsey on the verge of a kayo.

I have decided not to stand back and make a boxing contest out of the bout in the Yankee Stadium. The boxing public is craving for somebody to smash to the front with a knockout wallop. I shall try to satisfy this thirst for action when I tackle Loughran.

WHEN I step into the ring at the Yankee Stadium I shall give everything I have in the way of two-fisted fighting. I want to knock Loughran out as quickly as possible.

If I can end the battle in the first round, I'll do so, but in any event I shall keep pounding away with both fists until I have accomplished my purpose.

I realize I shall have quite a task on my hands as Loughran is one of the best boxers in the world. I do not believe Tommy would have any trouble outpointing Campolo, Schmeling or Scott. The Philadelphian has proved his ability in many important engagements, but I nevertheless feel he is doomed to be flattened in the coming bout.

I HAVE been particularly successful against former light heavyweights. McTigue, Delaney and Stribling have all met with disaster when they have tried to eliminate me. I do not believe Loughran will be able to triumph where the others failed.

The bout will mark Loughran's start as a heavyweight. In the past he has beaten first-class heavyweights like Johnny Risko and Ernie Schaaf, but on those occasions he always had the light heavyweight division to fall back upon.

Now Loughran has cut himself loose from the light heavyweight class. He has surrendered his title and is shooting for the crown vacated by Gene Tunney when he went social. Tommy says he will build up to 185 pounds for the bout.

It is a question whether all this extra weight will help Loughran. It may slow him down to a point where he will not find it as easy to get out of the way of punches.

I DO not believe Loughran can make 175 pounds any more without impairing his strength, but it is a question whether 165 is his best fighting notch right now. I am inclined to believe Loughran would be more dangerous if he were to enter the ring at 180 pounds.

All I ask is that Tommy gets himself into the best possible condition. I do not want him to be in a position to offer an alibi when he is defeated.

Nobody likes a squawker and I am anxious that the victor of the Yankee Stadium match gets all the credit to which he is entitled.

I HAVE half a dozen husky sparring partners in camp. From now on I shall do plenty of boxing. I want to key myself up so that I shall be able to maintain a terrific clip from the time I enter the ring until I have flattened Loughran.

I shall then stand ready to turn back the invading foreign heavyweights. The heavyweight championship of the world belongs in the United States. That is where it is going to remain if two fisted fighting means anything.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Golf's Greatest Teacher

Within the physical hazard is a constant liability in your golf game as a whole, always to be watched for and subdued in well disciplined golfing muscles. The particular department where muscle habits are most apt to entrench themselves is in your putting. This is the reason you find it to be so common for players to bewail their putting at different times. Some small putting muscle has picked up an atrocious putting habit—that's all there is to it. If you can put today isn't reasonable to assume that conditions being virtually equal, you could putt equally well tomorrow? What happens when you go utterly bad with all your putts? Simply, your left hand gets to pulling the blade forward too much, or too quickly, or you get a slight jerk or jump in your back swing, or you let your body weave—some simple bad form like that is the real cause. Just another instance of the physical hazard you must always contend with; understanding it as you now do, you should be able quickly to make corrections when you find them needed.

'Babe' Is Slipping, Hits Only Pair of Homers

Babe Ruth is slipping, just like a spiked shoe on a Persian rug, in the Yankee-Cleveland double-header yesterday, the Babe hit a pair of homers, one in each game. This brings the Babe's total up to 46. Lou Gehrig, the other one of the Yankee home run twins also hit a brace, one in each game and did the greater part of the passing to the backs in a long forward passing drill. His feeding of the ball to the backs was high grade, though it will be several days before he will be allowed to scrimmage.

Green 'Cantab' Eleven Will Face B. C. High Tomorrow

TEAM NEEDS BACKFIELD MATERIAL

CAMBRIDGE Latin will meet the B. C. high football eleven at Russell Field, North Cambridge, tomorrow afternoon, with not a single veteran in the Contab lineup.

Three lettermen are on hand. Ross, Brown and Laronde having earned the coveted "C" by appearing briefly in the Everett game on Thanksgiving Day.

Coach Leander MacDonald is not downhearted, however. His squad, though green, compares favorably with other Suburban League teams and shows an aptitude for learning the fundamentals of the gridiron game.

The Cantabs went through a scrimmage session with the Woburn High team at Woburn on Tuesday afternoon, after which Coach MacDonald pointed out some of the faults his squad had made in a blackboard drill.

PUNTER, PASSER NEEDED

A punter and a forward passer are being sought by MacDonald, and of the two, it is more important for Cambridge Latin to have a good kicker, especially this season, when the shortage of backfield stars is acute.

The first team lined up for a scrimmage with Coach Cohen and Powers on the wings: Ross and Buckley at the tackle berths; Sanderson and Sennett on the guard positions; Brown at center; and Dugan, McSweeney, Laronde and Pekar in the backfield.

Muello is a promising halfback candidate but there is some doubt whether he will be able to play tomorrow because of injuries.

60 OUT FOR ELEVEN

Swisher is showing signs of ability as a ball-carrier and may get into action against B. C. high.

The squad, which numbers 60 youths, went through signal drills and dummy blocking practice under the eyes of Coach MacDonald and his assistant, Jack Sheehan.

MacDonald expects a stiff fight from B. C. high tomorrow but thinks that Cambridge Latin will give a good account of itself.

Ringle players had a session with the tackling dummy, and many of the ferocious tacklers dived into the stuffing only to come up with a mouthful of rich South Cambridge loam.

Swampscott will open Danvers football season next Saturday at Danvers. The rest of the Danvers card: Sept. 28, Johnson high; Oct. 5, at Beverly; Oct. 12, Lawrence; Oct. 19, at Ipswich; Oct. 26, Stoneham; Nov. 2, Rockport; Nov. 9, at Manchester; Nov. 16, at Saugus; Nov. 26, open; Nov. 29 Essex Aggies.

Peabody's squad has been out for about two weeks, and is training hard for the opening game with Worcester Commerce on Saturday. Coach Bill Sullivan, and his assistant, Eddie O'Connor, have 60 boys in uniform, and are confident of giving Peabody one of its usual fine football teams.

The Peabody high schedule: Sept 21, Worcester High School of Commerce; Sept. 28, St. John's high of Worcester; Oct. 5, at Lawrence; Oct. 12, Beverly; Oct. 19, at Lawrence; Oct. 26, Chelsea; Nov. 2, at Salem; Nov. 9 or 16, B. C. high; Nov. 16, at Lynn English; Nov. 23, Woburn; Nov. 28, at Newburyport.

Somerville high opens its season on Sept. 28, entertaining Cranston high of Rhode Island, at Dilboy Field. The others games: Oct. 5, Waltham; Oct. 12, at Medford; Oct 19, at Cambridge Latin; Oct. 26, Newton; Nov. 2, Everett; Nov. 11, at Brookline; Nov. 16 Salem Trade; Nov. 28, at Rindge. Francis Escott is captain of the team

---

Peabody's probable starting lineup against Worcester High School of Commerce will be: Ends, Hall and Kingsley, ends; Capt. Halosen and Jullison, tackles; Kimball and Callan, guards; Drinkwater, center; Elita, Fatenaude, McGregor and Maistrellis make up the backfield.

Gardner high will open its season on Saturday, Sept. 28, at Gardner, with North Adams as its opponent.

Milton high will follow this football schedule: Sept. 27, Abington; Oct. 4 at Hyde Park; Oct. 12, open; Oct. 19, Reading; Oct. 26 at Wellesley; Nov. 1, at Milton Academy; Nov. 11, at Quincy. The clash with Milton Academy is the team's objective contest.

St. John's Prep starts off with Collegiate Prep on Oct. 5. Here's what will happen after that: Oct. 12, Boston College, '32; Oct. 19, Holy Cross, '32; Oct. 26, Johnson Academy; Nov. 2, Tilton Academy; Nov. 5, Dean Academy; Nov. 16, Bridgeton; Nov. 23, St. Anselm's College. The games with Holy Cross, '32, and Tilton Academy are the only contests away from home.

FRANK SMILEY-FRED FOX

MR. BOSTON by JACK CONWAY

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., Sept. 19—Mr. Boston was talking with Humbert J. Fugazy in the gym at Gus Wilson's camp when Bill Carey, president of Madison Square Garden, entered with a party of newspaper men. They had made the trip to Orangeburg to see Jack Sharkey work out for his 15-round bout with Tommy Loughran, which will be staged at the Yankee Stadium a week from tonight.

JACK CONWAY

Fugazy came here to see Campollo go through his training for his 10-round mill with Phil Scott, which is billed for Ebbets Field on next Monday night.

Some of the dear old experts have even declared it is a war to the pugilistic death between the Garden millionaires and Fugazy. Therefore, Mr. Boston's interest in the arrival of Carey.

The Garden head saw Fugazy and walked over to where his rival was standing.

"I am glad to see you again, Mr. Fugazy," said Carey in that captivating way of his. "I came along with some of the newspaper boys to see Sharkey work."

"I want to take this opportunity to tell you, Mr. Carey, that I know that no official connected with the Garden tried to get Campollo to break any contract he has with me. I was misinformed when I made my statement."

"After Sharkey finishes his workout, I would like you to have lunch with me," said Carey. "I'll tell Gus Wilson to make the necessary arrangements."

"I would also like you to have Campollo ready to work out as soon as we have had lunch. I know how newspaper boys in my party will like to get a look at the Argentine Giant, and I want to see him myself."

FUGAZY kept looking at Carey for a minute.

"This is awfully nice of you," said Humbert, who has had more than his share of hard luck. "I am not accustomed to receiving such courtesies from another promoter."

"I cannot understand why the boxing game cannot be made like any other business," declared Carey. "Down in Wall Street rival business groups sit down and talk things over."

SHARKEY punched the small bag for two rounds and then boxed two rounds each with Jack Gagnon and Jackie Saunders. The visiting fighters expressed the opinion that the Boston contender is in fighting form right now, and that he can afford to let down in his workouts. When he stepped on the scales Sharkey weighed 196 pounds.

"I CANNOT get down lower than this notch," Sharkey told Mr. Boston, "since I developed around my chest and shoulders since the Stribling bout, when I scaled 193 pounds. I feel very strong, and am not worrying about the outcome of my bout with Loughran.

"I feel confident I shall win and get the big shot at Miami, Fla., next February."

MR. BOSTON waited to see Campollo step four rounds. Jack Sharkey, former bantamweight skier, directed his work. There was a cherry twinkle in Fugazy's eye as he watched Campollo in action.

"That big fellow will cure all of my headaches if he comes through," asserted Fugazy. "I will then forget about the ordinary run of boxing shows and feature Campollo in two matches each year. He is the greatest puncher the heavyweight class has known since Dempsey first came crashing down the fistic trail."

"DO you think Schmeling will ever fulfill the contract he has with you?" querried Mr. Boston. "Nobody knows what Schmeling will do," said Fugazy sadly. "Max's American managers poisoned his mind against Scott, claiming that Jimmy Johnston would get the break for the British champion on the decision.

"They later wanted Schmeling to go through with the bout but he balked. He had been sold on the idea that Johnston would bring about his defeat.

"Max also saw Scott box twice in Europe and has great respect for the Britisher's left hand. Schmeling told me he would have to knock out Scott to win, and declared he would need at least five or six weeks to get ready for the match.

"If Campollo comes through, I'll forget all about Schmeling."

MR. BOSTON asked Fugazy if Roberti was planning to return to this country from Italy.

"Roberti has cabled me that he will soon return," said Fugazy. "He lost some of his heart for boxing when Campollo knocked him out in South America. Roberti was a big favorite in Boston. Bob McKirdy has wired Joe Bagley an offer for Roberti to meet the winner of the Rawson-Mills bout. They tell me this Rawson is quite a hitter. So is Campollo."

As in former years, the entire proceeds of the opening game will be donated to the Knights of Columbus charity fund.

Coaches Whalen and Santry have been working with a squad of 46 candidates for the past month, and Tuesday evening made a final selection of those who will represent the Caseys during the coming season.

Such stars as O'Leary, O'Brien, Hurley, Wallis, Mehegan, Norton, Donahue, Manser and Combs, all veterans, will be back in the lineup.

INDIANS PLAY RED SOX TODAY

the Indians, who are said to be tough to lick.

ROGER PECKINPAUGH, manager of the invaders, expects the Red Sox will prove tougher customers than any of the other Eastern clubs his charges stacked up against on the trip but is confident they will lose no ground while in the Hub.

"The Sox," opined Peck this morning," are in the cellar but they are far from being a last-place club. They got off on the wrong foot, that's why they are so low. For the past six weeks, the teams in the circuit have been playing better ball. The last time they were in Cleveland, they took three out of five from us.

"We are playing our best ball of the season right now, and I don't think the Sox can gain the edge over us again. I do look, though, for a hard fight all the way."

EXCEPT for stating that he believes the Indians should be pennant contenders next year, the enemy pilot was very reticent when it came to talking about his own club. He insists he has done nothing out of the ordinary with it.

He needn't say much about it, it speaks for itself. Any team that can rise from seventh place to third in a year is good no matter what is said for or against it.

It is strange to have a manager disclaim all credit for the fine showing of a club, but Peck isn't exactly stating an untruth when he says he isn't responsible for it.

The former most valuable player is a smart, capable leader and without him, the club would probably be lower than it is.

Welters to Feature St. Joe's Opener

Some of the best fighting of the St. Joe's opening show Saturday night is expected in the popular 147-pound class, for the boys are small enough to be fast and big enough to punch hard.

'CAVMEN' NO MATCH FOR FACULTY

FORDHAM UNIVERSITY eleven, fostered for two years by Maj. Frank Cavanaugh, in the hope of a first great triumph over Boston College, will probably have to wait at least another year to gain it.

Twice the Iron Duke of Football has brought his Fordham charges against Boston College, and on both occasions he failed.

The preliminary sessions of last fall have unprecedented success on the football field, and this year the Cavmen were picked to lead the pack in the East.

The Fordham Athletic Association made plans for a squad of 50 men, picked from the varsity squad of last season and the freshman team of pleasant memory. Then the Fordham faculty entered the picture. The grades of every footballer were given the once over, and on the first play the Fordham faculty put nearly twenty men out of the game.

And out of the game for them means that they were sent through at Fordham or else ineligible for further competition.

Maj. Cavanaugh began to pick the pieces and put them together. His 1929 model did not look mighty then, but still Cav have a good team. The entire varsity squad now consists of less than 35 men.

FORDHAM will probably be one of the best first teams in the East, and will certainly Boston College a real run for money on November 2 he Boston.

Substitute material alone lacking, as Cav will have only few first-class subs, and the difference between first and the ordinary second team will be noticeable.

It's an ill wind that doesn't blow someone good, and the faculty wind that swept the corridors from football timber gave seven boys a real chance at Fordham.

Elmer McNamara, former Manhattan College football player, and Hilkert Joy, coach at B. C. under Cavanaugh, will coach the Fordham eleven a transplanted New England football team.

TOBIN, from Jamaica Plain high school, and Adam Elsewicz from Cambridge, are two ends who will see action in every game, according to the coaches. Kloppenburg and Hanifey are the regular ends, but the local boys will be in there.

The tackles go to New England unanimously. There are only four in the Fordham football zoo, and all four come from hereabouts. Miskinis, from Brockton high, and Foley from Portland, are the regulars.

Holmberg, another blonde giant from Brockton, and Connor of Portland, are the subs. Conroy weighs over 200 pounds, and is nearly 6 feet 5 inches in height. Big is an honor men in the studies at Fordham.

Conroy, the former Waltham high school and Clarke school lineman and punter, and Healey, a Worcester high school boy from New England end, incidentally, the varsity guards.

Capt. Tom Siano, one of the best pivot men in the country last season, comes from Waltham. Frank Davis, Archbishop Cheverus center from Cambridge Latin, is also out for the job and will see plenty of action despite the captaincy of Siano. Davis and Siano are the same type of player. They will play football and fight anyone.

'LITTLE' FROCK LOOMS BIG IN FRENCH CAPITAL

A KISS FOR CORINNA

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER 21.

"GREAT show, isn't it?" commented van Tuyl at her elbow. "Most amusing to recognize in the procession every one who's anybody. Not that THAT'S difficult because the grease-paint isn't laid on much thicker than usual, even as for the get-up, or the lack of it, women wear next to nothing anyhow."

This was exactly the sort of a speech that Corinna would have expected from the Van Wyck entourage. She wished he had the wits to say something that would put him in his place.

But Marie did that for her. Marie had a tongue like the cut of a razor.

Peter Pattison came on the other side of Corinna. And they all strolled around the arena together.

Peter Pattison alternated between gloom and a forced gaiety. "Suppose we fix up a party of four?" he suggested eagerly. "Marie and I and Clara and yourself, Miss Corinna? I pulled off a bit of luck in Pittsburgh. Why shouldn't we celebrate?"

This was awkward. She ought to tell him to take his wife out for said celebration, but—though he had behaved abominably in hiding his marriage—she couldn't snub the poor man who was looking already so miserable. On the other hand she wasn't going to take it on herself to arrange a party that would bring Marie and him together.

Marie was roaming with van Tuyl around the Garden, Corinna—with Malvey on one side and the snubbed Peter on the other—was immediately behind her.

They stopped before a fortune-teller's tent. Peter, plucking up courage, took Marie by the arm and tried to draw her away from van Tuyl, and into the little booth with himself.

"I had my hand read in Pittsburgh, Marie, and there was a long piece about you in it. You come with me—" he tendered a five-dollar bill at the box-office "We'll verify it."

Marie hesitated. Then, with a little careless shrug of her shoulders meant to indicate that she should worry, she disappeared under the flap with Peter. . . .

Came the whiff of an intoxicating oriental perfume, clink of bangle chains and rattle of jewels, and Miss Van Wyck—as radiantly beautiful close as she had appeared from the gallery—stood before them.

"Hello, Jack!" She extended her hand with its long, pointed and brilliantly-rouged nails to the young man, who took it, greeting her. Then with a little cry of pleasure she turned to Malvey:

"What a piece of luck running into you! How did you like the show? What did you think of my performance?"

"You looked magnificent!" he answered. In the brilliant lighting of the Garden, Corinna could see a flush rise to his cheeks, and his eyes were smiling and eager. "You put the Lady of the Nile to shame—judging by the other pictures I have seen of her."

Said van Tuyl, like a challenge "Denise doesn't know the meaning of the word 'shame.' I can assure you. But she's got nothing to be ashamed of, so why hide her charms under a bushel or a garment?"

"Be quiet, Jackie. You chatter so. I should have taken you in my retinue as monkey." Then, with a provocative look at Malvey: "Did you admire my costume? Wasn't it really quite correct, according to the period?"

She was wearing now a magnificent, metal-brocaded wrap twisted around her sinuous young body. Her eyes, heavily kohled beneath the wig of flaming hair, looked big and voluptuous.

She took no more notice of Corinna than if the latter were a fly on the ceiling. . . .

Instead of answering her directly, Malvey looked from Miss Van Wyck to the other girl and murmured something, by way of bringing the latter into Cleopatra's orbit.

Cleopatra, who had been waving a peacock fan between them so that her oversight did not seem so noticeable, now turned to Corinna in the grand manner, exclaiming: "What? You here! My little hairdresser—?"

"You here! My little hairdresser—!"

Why shouldn't she be here? Hadn't Malvey brought her? Hadn't she the right, like other people, to go out for an evening's enjoyment?

But stay! Had Malvey bought that ticket just to give her pleasure? Hadn't he been lured here by the other? Like a moth that flutters to the candle, hadn't he been impelled by the volition and the attraction of the Van Wyck heiress?

She was like a flame tonight in the gleaming metal wrap that breathed her exquisite young body. And that hair of hers—just like a burning bush it was—made her small face exquisitely mysterious.

Cleverly, and conversing all the time, Miss Van Wyck now edged herself between Corinna and the young man. As she addressed him she purposely lowered her voice.

Van Tuyl came over to Corinna. "Seems you and I are fated to be left out in the cold? You might have already ditched me." His practiced eye took in Corinna's simple little frock, her lack of make-up. But she was good-looking—when you got closer to her.

Typical for Fall Wear

Sketched in Paris

Season One of Lavish Display

FROM PARIS BUREAU BOSTON AMERICAN.

Paris, Sept. 19—The "little" frock is very big here just now. In a season remarkable for magnificence and lavish sartorial display, it is truly remarkable to find such intense interest focussed on the simple little dressmaker frock.

But the couturiers have learned that many of their best clients are women whose days are taken up with business and charitable activities rather than with an unceasing round of social duties and bridge games.

And so the designers have concentrated their genius on clothes that are comfortable and trim looking, and find that their efforts are amply rewarded by the increasing number of orders placed for such dresses.

High, low or in the middle. The great waist controversy wages merrily, with each house sponsoring its own particular version of what is sometimes like the equator, an imaginary line.

For we have watched very large ladies, as well as painfully thin ones, take violent issue with their couturier as to the position of the waistline of their gowns, but who remain blissfully unconcerned as to their natural symmetry.

Jean Patou is one of the designers favoring the natural waistline, and he has also rendered yeoman service to the cause of the little frock, and so has done much to popularize it.

We show you today at the right one of his most successful interpretations of it. It is in dark brown tweed with flecks of beige. The silhouette gives prominence to the normal waistline.

A delightful detail is the zig-zag fastening with small bone buttons, at cuffs, neck and hips. The skirt has a snug yoke and two large patch pockets, and there is a slight circular movement at the front.

Marcel Rochas has been very successful with tweed creations this season, and so we have selected for illustration at left one of the latest models from this house.

It is in gray tweed with a knotted design in black and a black kid belt. Softening details are the pleated flounce on the skirt, and the tiny pleated jabot at the neckline.

The silhouette is very much in the prevailing mode with its snug, close line down to the knees and a flaring movement below. Black accessories accentuate the smartness of this costume.

Catch as many evening frocks in your net as possible. It's net season, and the coarse nets are all the vogue. One girlish frock is of white net over a flowered taffeta foundation. The skirt touches the ground in a stiff manner. Net ruching is the only trimming.

The long and the short of it is the long dress, and the accompanying short wrap or coat. We all know that long skirts have definitely re-established themselves, but the chic mam'zelle wears a jaunty little coat with her fur, and sees that it is lavishly trimmed with fur.

Grandma's clock finds a new resting place on maiden's neck. Period clock necklaces are the most recent craze, and these petite jeweled replicas are worn as pendants on a platinum chain. Sometimes the clock case is of platinum, the little face of porcelain, and the numerals are marked by tiny diamonds.

The Normal Waistline

Sketched in Paris

Patou stresses the normal waistline this season. Here is a dark brown tweed frock with a fleck of beige. The skirt has a snug yoke and two large patch pockets.

GREETING A LADY

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer American readers' questions on etiquette. Write to her care of this newspaper.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: I understand, when visiting a friend and her mother enters the room, it is proper for me to rise, but if she shows no intention of being seated, must I remain standing until she leaves the room?

2. If she is seated must I rise with her when she leaves the room?

3. If she appears the second time would it be necessary for me to rise again?

4. If a young man is with me should I rise when he does or remain seated?

5. When being introduced to a young man, should I rise to shake hands with him? BETTY.

YES, you stand until she leaves the room, or for you to be seated would distinctly call attention to a breach of good manners.

2. Yes.
3. Yes.
4. Rise when he rises.
5. No. (And by the way, the gentleman is introduced to the lady, not the lady to the gentleman.)

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have been to see my sister-in-law about six times since I have been married. Should I continue to call on her? OUTSIDER.

Yes. There may be many reasons that she may not have time to call oftener. The wise woman does everything in her power to keep her relationships with her in-laws as upstanding and healthy as possible, and I urge you to use this wisdom. Don't develop an oversensitive attitude, and keep yourself in the frame of mind that "understands" and is not looking for social rebuffs.

PEACH DELICACIES

TODAY I want to have a "peachy" chat with you.

Just as one never tires of strawberries in early summer, so peaches may appear on our menus almost every day during their season, providing there is a little variety in the choice of recipes.

Martha Lee

Luscious, juicy peach pie is always a favorite in my family, . . especially when the golden fruit is encrusted between layers of flaky, crisp pastry.

Really, this is a Peach Pie that fairly melts in your mouth. Let's start with the pastry.

PIE CRUST

1½ cups pastry flour
¾ tsp. salt
½ cup lard
About 1-3 cup cold water

Sift the dry ingredients and cut in the lard until mixture is of the consistency of coarse corn meal. Then mix in the water, just enough to hold the flour and fat particles together. Chill for one hour. Toss on floured board, cut in half, roll out half for lower crust, line pan with pastry, moisten rim with cold water. Have ready

1½ cups sliced peaches
1 cup sugar (more if tart)
1 tbsp. butter

Put sliced peaches in pastry-lined pan, sprinkle with sugar and dot with the butter. Roll out upper crust, make several incisions in the pastry, lay upper crust over pie, and press the edges together using two fingers. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees F., for 10 minutes to set pastry, then reduce heat to 375 degrees F. and continue baking for 25 minutes. The crust should be a golden brown. Cool slowly and serve while slightly warm.

Here's another peach dessert that is a favorite in my household. This is a company dessert and easily made.

PEACH DELICIOUS

Butter a glass or enamel oblong dish or large deep pie pan. Cover the bottom generously with sliced peaches, then sprinkle the top with the following mixture:

½ cup butter
¾ cup sugar
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. cinnamon
1½ cups sifted flour

Work all together with fingers as for crumb cake top. When thoroughly mixed sprinkle over the peaches. Then dot with 1 tsp. butter and bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees F., for 25 minutes, until top is golden brown. Cool slightly, cut into squares and serve with or without whipped cream.

FRESH PEACH UPSIDE-DOWN CAKE.

1-3 cup butter
⅔ cup brown sugar
Halved peaches
3 eggs
1 cup granulated sugar
1 cup flour
4 tbsps. water
1 tsp. vanilla
1½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt

Cream the butter and brown sugar and spread in the bottom of a 10-inch iron skillet or heavy cake pan with deep sides. Place the peach halves in the sugar and butter mixture, rounded side of peach toward the bottom of the pan.

Separate the eggs and beat the yolks until thick and lemon colored. Add the sugar gradually continuing beating. If mixture gets too stiff to beat, add a little of the water. Mix and sift the dry ingredients and add alternately with the remaining water and vanilla. Beat the egg whites until stiff and fold into the batter. Pour over the peaches and bake 45 minutes in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.). Remove from oven let stand a few minutes, cut from sides of pan and turn upside down onto a large plate. Serve warm or cold, plain or with whipped cream.

WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE only book "heroines" that the modern girl seems to enjoy reading about are the sort of women that she would not speak to on the street.

The hardest luck a girl can have, in this life, is to "save all her kisses for the right man"—and then marry the wrong one.

No matter how much you expect of a husband, alas, you always find something about him that you DIDN'T suspect.

A man's winter loves like his winter clothes, may be carried over from year to year; but his summer love, like his bathing suit, is just a one-season affair, and is usually frazzled out before that is half over.

The worthiest man sometimes looks back upon all the creditable deeds of his career, with a faint feeling of regret, and remembers with a thrill of pride only the one or two little temptations he failed to resist.

Every man is at heart something of a romanticist; and when a girl becomes too hard-boiled to awaken his imagination, she soon discovers that she can't even arouse his senses, beyond a kiss or two.

Some men have to have a lively breakfast-table argument to tone them up for the day. But, to an intelligent woman, it seems foolish to waste a lot of brilliant logic on a man who is legally bound to listen to her.

The most faithful and devoted husbands always seem to have the dowdiest wives. It's the uncertain kind, who inspire a woman to spend her days running around beauty parlors, and passionately pursuing new diets and complexion treatments.

It's astonishing, how little hope a man's love can live on—and how quickly a little certainty will kill it.

HE HAS ANOTHER GIRL

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I recently met a very nice boy. He has taken me to several dances and to the theater quite often.

Through a girl friend I learned that he goes steadily with another girl and has for over a year. He has never told me about the other girl, although I believe he thinks I know about her. Do you think I should go about with him when there's someone else that he surely must care for? D. S.

IF I were you, D. S., I would have a frank, friendly chat with the young man who goes about with another girl yet is attentive to you. Just ask him whether he is engaged to her, because, if he is pledged to any other girl, you would not care to go about with him, for her sake and your own. Of course, he is not going steadily with any other girl or he could not go about with you.

In case he and the other girl are just good friends, but not engaged, I see no reason why you and he should not also be good friends and enjoy each other's companionship.

Bulls Take Joe to the Station

CHAPTER 27.

WILLOUGHBY passed the cigarettes and they all left the table. Joe went back to the lounge, Olga sat in one of the armchairs, and Willoughby pulled up an ottoman and sat facing her.

Willoughby hesitated before he said:

"Olga, when we going to take that little trip?"

"I don't know," said Olga.

"What little trip?" asked Joe, looking at Olga.

"Why, I got a cabin up in Wisconsin," said Willoughby, "and I thought before it got cold it would be nice for Olga to go up and take a rest."

"Yeah?" said Joe.

As soon as Willoughby lowered his eyes, Olga winked at Joe.

"Maybe I could pull it," said Olga.

"Sure," said Joe. "Olga works too hard, that's a fact. A little rest wouldn't hurt her none.

"That's just what I was thinking," said Willoughby. "She could sure get a rest up there. I got a couple nice motor boats and the fishing's great."

"Fishing!" said Olga, looking at Joe.

"Well," Willoughby considered, "maybe you wouldn't care for that, but there are any number of things you could do. Anyway, the air's great, nothing like the Chicago muck."

"Sounds good," said Olga.

The waiters came to take away the table, but they were immediately followed by DeVoss, who motioned them out. There was something so strange about DeVoss' actions that Joe sat up and stared at him. DeVoss said:

"Joe, there's a couple of guys looking for you."

"Yeah?" said Joe. "What kind of guys?"

"Bulls," said DeVoss, "what you been up to?"

Olga got to her feet and stood staring at DeVoss. Willoughby exclaimed:

"What's all this! What's all this!"

Joe took an automatic from his hip pocket and put it in Olga's dressing-table. Olga took hold of DeVoss's arm and said:

"Tell them Joe ain't here. Joe, honey, beat it. I'll see if I can find out what it's all about."

"What do you carry that thing for?" he demanded.

Olga said:

"Oh, be quiet!

Joe grinned at Willoughby.

"Just in case," he said.

"Listen, Olga," said DeVoss, "this is serious. I could tell the way they acted. I told them I didn't think Joe was here, but they just laughed."

Joe stood undecided.

"Joe," DeVoss went on, "remember that time Mr. Rico was over here and a couple of bulls shadowed him? Well, the big one's here."

"Flaherty!" cried Joe.

Olga gave Joe a push.

"Beat it, Joe. You know them bulls. They'll frame you."

"O.K., honey," said Joe.

"Why, Joe," said Willoughby, "you mean to tell me you're in some kind of trouble?"

"Oh, be quiet," said Olga.

"Goodbye, honey," he said to Olga, "you'll hear from me."

"Better face the music," said Willoughby.

"Go out through the kitchen," said DeVoss.

Joe opened the door but closed it immediately and said:

"It's all up. Here they come."

He looked in agony at Olga. "Wasn't this just his rotten luck! Penned up in a room three stories above the pavement. He made a dash for the dressing-table, but Olga grabbed his arm.

"For God's sake, Joe," said DeVoss, "don't cause no trouble in my place. I don't know what they want you for and I don't give a damn. I'll get you a lawyer and see you through, but, for God's sake, don't do no shooting in my place."

"Damn it," cried Joe, "you think I'm gonna let 'em take me like I was a purse-snatcher on his first stand."

He pushed Olga away from him and was pulling at the dressing-table drawer when a door opened and Flaherty came in, followed by Spike Rieger. Flaherty had his right hand in his coat pocket.

"What's the idea, Flaherty?" he demanded.

"Well," said Flaherty, "we got a big audience here and I ain't much on embarrassing people, so you better just come along and we'll have a nice little talk."

"Aw, can that," said Joe.

Willoughby walked over to Flaherty.

"My name's Willoughby," he said, "John C Willoughby. I suppose you've heard of me. Say, what's this all about anyway? Why, I've known Joe for nearly a year and as far as I know he's a nice young fellow."

"Yeah," said Flaherty, "Joe's a pretty smooth young fellow, but we caught up with him."

Flaherty turned to Rieger.

"Well, we'll see about this," said Willoughby. "I'll have my lawyer down in half an hour."

Olga flung herself on the lounge and began to cry.

"And let me give you an earful, Mr. Willoughby," said Flaherty, "for a guy of your class you sure ain't very careful about who you mix up with. These two birds here are taking you, see, and if I was you I'd sneak out of it and forget all about getting a lawyer."

"If that ain't a bull for you," said Joe.

"Don't pay any attention to him, Jack," said Olga.

"Certainly not," said Willoughby.

"All right, Spike," said Flaherty, "I guess we wasted enough time on these birds. Put the cuffs on him."

Olga jumped up and made a grab for Rieger, but De Voss caught her from the back and held her.

"Ain't dames awful?" said Flaherty.

Willoughby went over to Olga and tried to talk to her, but she continued to struggle. Rieger took out his handcuffs and walked over to Joe.

"Wait a minute," said Joe, "you can't put no bracelets on me. Where's your warrant?"

Rieger took the warrant out of his pocket and handed it to Joe. Joe read it slowly, then, without comment, handed it back.

"Well, Joe," said Flaherty.

"What do they want you for, Joe?" cried Olga.

"Never mind," said Joe, "they ain't no case."

Olga stopped struggling.

"You mean it, Joe?"

"Sure," said Joe, "they ain't no case at all. I'll be out in twenty-four hours."

"Aw, it's just one of their wise

Willoughby Offers His Lawyer

"Shall I get my lawyer?" asked Willoughby.

"Ain't much use," said Joe. DeVoss came over to Flaherty and said:

"You got a nerve," said Flaherty, "why I ought to pull you in for complicity. Didn't you come back here after Joe got off?"

DeVo got pale.

"Honest to God, I didn't tip him off. I just told him a couple of guys want to see him."

"Pipe down," said Flaherty. "Come on, Joe, let's take a ride."

Joe's face was ghastly, but he grinned.

"O.K.," he said, "it's the first ride I ever took with any of you birds."

"Well, I hope it's the last," said Flaherty.

"Want me to come down and see you, Joe?" asked Olga.

"No," said Joe.

They put Joe between two policemen in the back seat of the police car, Rieger and Flaherty were in front. The traffic was light as it was nearly three o'clock in the morning. Rieger drove carelessly, and Joe had to hold on most of the time and talked to Flaherty.

"Say," said Joe, "that bird don't care how he drives."

The policeman laughed.

"Say," said Joe "can I smoke?"

"No," said Flaherty; "what the hell you think it is, Joe! Maybe we better pick up a couple of girls for you."

The policemen laughed.

"Funny thing," said Joe, "you know I'm a steady, a friend of mine told me the other day that he didn't think you'd live long."

"Yeah?" said Flaherty, "I know that friend of yours. He ain't looking any too healthy himself."

Author of "The HOLLYWOOD GIRL"

CHAPTER 28.

"I'D take you out to dinner," Neal said, "but I seem to be dead broke." All but this—" He laughed and held out a few silver coins on the palm of his hand.

Ann Marie shook her head at him gravely. "I wouldn't let you take me out to dinner if you had a twenty-dollar bill, Neal Flaherty. I'm going to pay my way, just as we planned. Everything is going to be different now. Now you go home and let me get my things unpacked."

But when he was gone, she made no move to unpack her trunk and bags.

She opened her own door without a sound. On tiptoe she crossed the landing and went down the stairs to the street.

It was getting dark and far down the street she could see the lighted front of a store.

When she got to it she saw it was a delicatessen and fruit-stand. It was very good one. Its shelves were loaded with all kinds of things to eat and drink.

Ann Marie bought recklessly for once. She felt reckless and happy that night.

She went home with a bag under one arm and a long, crusty loaf of French bread under the other.

Neal was knocking on the panels of her door when she reached the top floor of the apartment.

"Nobody's home in that flat," she called to him gaily. "The lady who thinks there is having dinner with Mr. Neal Forsythe, the famous portrait painter."

The words "portrait painter" made her think, for an instant, of Leota again, but she pushed the thought into the back of her mind . . . She wasn't going to be jealous or suspicious any more. She was her with the man she loved and she was going to trust him.

"Open your door for me," she said. "I'm going to show you how I can cook"

She stood still for a second on the sill threshold of his big studio room.

She had never dreamed that a studio could be so untidy.

All around the edge of the floor, propped against the wall, were big sheets of cardboard and canvas-covered frames.

There were more of them piled on the window-seat, and at one end of the long narrow table that stood in the middle of the room. On another table stood a vase filled with dead, dried-up roses. There was a smoking jacket flung over one end of the screen that hid the kitchen table and the sink.

And, oh! that sink! It was furry with rust and coated with gray slime. It was filled with dirty dishes and on the drainboard was the saddest-looking dish cloth that Ann Marie had ever seen

"Your Leota doesn't seem to have been much of a dishwasher—" Ann Marie began, and then remembered that she was never going to speak of Leota again.

"She wasn't supposed to wash dishes," Neal said drily. "You did not believe me when I told you she came her simply as a model, did you? You still think I've been having a love affair with her, don't you?"

"Oh, no! no! I was just teasing you," said Ann Marie, afraid that they might have another quarrel

She took off her hat and coat, tied the only clean dish-towel she could find about her waist, and set to work.

"You go into my flat and bring some clean towels," she ordered, handing Neal her key. "I'm going to keep house for you for about an hour, you poor thing."

If anyone had told Ann Marie that it was fun to do dishes, she wouldn't have believed it.

But she enjoyed the washing of every one of the dozens and dozens of dirty plates and cups and saucers that she washed and put away that night.

While she was busy with them she boiled water for a pot of tea and heated a steak pan on the tiny electric stove that stood on the table

She washed a head of lettuce, put it into a bowl of cold water, and set it out on the window sill, beside the tiny bottle of cream and the half pound of butter that she had bought.

"I'm having the time of my life," she said to Neal, as they worked.

"It's like working in a doll's house."

"It was like being married," she told herself as she flew around the studio, plumping up the flattened cushions on the window-seat, and turning up the old papers that were piled in the fire-place.

"I'm going out for some cigarettes," Neal Forsythe said, clapping his hat on his head.

When he came back twenty minutes later, the studio room looked more like a home to him than ever it had looked before.

Ann Marie had begged an old soap box from the janitor and it was burning brightly in the fire-place

The daffodils were in the vase where the withered roses had been, and there was a clean cloth on the little table in front of the fire.

A steak was broiling on the tiny electric stove, and bread was toasting on the toaster that stood on the little dinner table.

It was the life

For three days Ann Marie did nothing but keep house for Neal, and never had she known that life could be so wonderful.

Every morning she put her own room to rights and then she hurried across the hall and knocked on Neal's door

She got breakfast for him

While she was cleaning up the table, washing the dishes and making his bed—it was a day-bed like her own—Neal read the morning papers and smoked many cigarettes.

"I don't feel like working lately," he told her on Sunday morning. "I'm so happy having you here that I just want to mooch around and look at you."

"I ought to be finding some work," she said unhappily "In fact, I've just got to find some thing to do, that's all."

"Pack up some of your work and bring it over here tonight," Neal suggested lazily, throwing his cigarette end into the grate. "You remember Jim Goodwin? His folks have a publishing house they bring out books, you know, of all kinds—and he might be able to give you some work, doing the illustrations for some book. Ever do pictures for children's books?"

Ann Marie shook her head.

"Of course not. I've never known any people who wrote books or printed books or had anything to do with books, except to sell them," she said. "But I've done loads of pictures of rabbits and valentines and Christmas cards—oh, do you think he would have some work for me?"

She spoke quickly, almost breathlessly, as she did when she was stirred or excited over anything.

"Well, we can soon find out," said Neal. "We'll telephone him and ask him to come for supper tonight. You'll have to run across the street and use the telephone in the drugstore. I had one, but they took it out. I owed the company some money"

"You 'phone him," pleaded Ann Marie. "I hate to. I hardly know him."

"You call him. He'll be sure to come then. He's mad shortly. "He's gone absolutely 'hay-wire' over you"

Ann Marie stared at him, wide-eyed

"And yet you want me to telephone him?" she asked. "Aren't you jealous of me a bit, Neal?"

He shook his head at her.

"Nope," he said, grinning up at her in his boyish way, "not the least bit. I know you like me, Ann Marie"

The Boaster -:- Interesting Short Story by Charles Sloan Reid

OLD "PAP" Denkler came out of the house with a small jug in his hand, went by the smokehouse in the yard, and drew from beneath a corner of the sills a small rubber siphon which he quickly doubled up in his hand and thrust into the bosom of his shirt.

Then he puttered around to the front of the cabin, and, shading his eyes with his hand, he gazed for some moments down the trail which led away from the little yard toward the mountain and 400 yards away from the ridge. Satisfied, he turned once more, and soon disappeared round the corner of the old double log cabin which had been his home for 70 years.

A little way above the house to the rear was a small grotto of cedars. Among these, deeply covered over with the fallen cedar sails and needles were two graves. He always stopped at this spot and bared his head for a moment. Here lay sleeping, for the past 20 years, his wife, Jane, and his only daughter, Ann. Both had died in the same week of typhoid.

There had been an only son, too, "Ellery," but he had run away from home when a mere lad of 12. The old man had heard nothing of him since that day. If living Ellery would have been a man of 35 now. Stories of the World War had drifted into the mountain country, and Pap, in his mind, had buried Ellery, too, among the cedars.

So, when he paused here, in the little grotto, he felt himself in the bosom of his family, silent though the voices were, which once had brought such joy to his ears. Pap had gone over in his memory thousands of times the circumstances under which Ellery had left home The old man had chastised the boy severely for going fishing when his mother had told him to set the cabbage plants. That had been all.

Pap had moved on beyond the cedars and turned into a little trail which led off through a mass of honeysuckle vines that had massed themselves about some fallen trees. Here the hogs and the calves had made numerous paths through the wilderness of vines, so that from the labyrinth one might be led in any of a number of directions.

But Mrs. Denkler's footsteps led him unerringly. Emerging at the base of a low cliff he began to ascend the ridge which formed one side of the ravine that sloped away to the river, more than a half a mile away. Pap had a habit of repeating to himself almost daily, and always a number of times when he went up the mountain, a sentence which had come to have to his mind a sort of talismanic significance.

He repeated it as a sort of exorcism against the possibility of a surprise sometime. On up the side of the mountain he had moved, swinging his jug along among the undergrowth which now was large-ly stripped of its foliage. Pap always had more or less misgivings, when the foliage was thin in the fall and winter, and he was wont to repeat oftener at such seasons the words, "Old Pap ain't never been kotched onct."

With the trees fairly denuded, the view had a wider range up and down and from side to side of the ridge So Pap redoubled his caution, often pausing for some moments while he swept his surroundings with his gaze. He liked to assure himself that his old eyes never missed the movement of a bird or a squirrel or the turn of a leaf But he was growing more stooped year after year, until, as he climbed the ridge, he appeared to be a grotesquely animated, interrogation mark.

After toiling up the ridge for a quarter of a mile Pap stopped and looked down upon the charred section of an old tree trunk which lay upon a bed of dead leaves in a slight depression of the soil whence a stump had been lifted at some time. He steadied himself, and, straightening his backbone as far as was possible, gazed carefully around him.

Dropping to his knees he rolled away the blackened log, and scratched a small heap of leaves aside from the mass which had lain beneath it. Revealed there was a small oak log, lying upon its side, with a bung in the bulging center of it. Pap's hand dove into the heap of leaves still surrounding the keg, and drew forth a cudgel about one end of which was fastened a piece of an old automobile tire. With this instrument he rapped stoutly on each side of the bung which after a moment was loosened in the bunghole.

Pap lifted the wooden plug out carefully with his fingers Then, dragging the siphon from his breast, he dropped one end of it into the keg, applying his lips to the other end. This end of the tube he quickly transferred to the mouth of his jug which he was holding at a lower elevation. A part of the contents of the keg soon was transferred. The old man then sucked a satisfying draught into his own throat, after which he smacked his lips, and withdrew the siphon.

"Hit gits better'n better," he declared to himself.

Pap selected his customers with great care, and had little fear of anyone informing against him through malice or spite; but he was careful not to invite visitors to the little still which had its existence in a dug-out in the river bank so well concealed that none but the chipmunks might find it without his guidance.

"Old Pap ain't never been kotched onct."

But, as he arose and turned about, he found himself gazing into the muzzle of an automatic held in the right hand of a stranger who towered triumphantly above him.

"Well, old fellow," the man behan, "it's a pity you've got to go to jail in your old age, but I guess you'll have to come along with me."

Don't Try to Carry the World

By LUCY LOWELL

SOMEONE has said that humanity is made up of two classes: those who walk and those who ride. And the writers are supposed to be far more admirable than the riders, they being industrious folk with a sense of responsibility, the ones who may be depended upon to see that everything does not go to pot.

But somehow I like the riding spirit; I like the debonair turn of mind which refuses to take life too seriously.

One of my childhood shadows was a picture in an old mythology of Atlas, bowed by the weight of the world. At the age of five or so I used to pore over this picture, feeling tremendously sorry for the poor old fellow, with his furrowed brow, his downcast eyes, his whole down-trodden appearance.

Later, when some kindly teacher told me that Atlas had chosen to hold up the world and that he actually enjoyed upon that burden, I lost all sympathy for him. Foolish old thing, why didn't he let the globe rest on his shoulders and go striding away under the blue sky with his head up, roaring a song of freedom?

And this is something the way I feel about those who take too heavy burdens upon their shoulders; burdens of responsibility which might be light enough regarded less solemnly.

Goethe said, "If the morning wake us to a new joys, if the evening bring us not the hope of new pleasure, is it worth while to dress and undress? Does the sun shine on me today that I may reflect on yesterday? Is that my endeavor to foresee and to control what can neither be foreseen nor controlled—the destiny of tomorrow?"

15 BILLIONS IN MERGERS FOR QUARTER

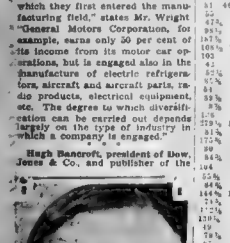
By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Stupendous growth of the merger movement in America is brought out by the calculation of Gage B. Wright, economist and president of the Business Economic Digest.

President Wright tells me he finds that mergers for the first quarter of 1929 alone involved over fifteen billion dollars in capitalization.

"A number of our larger corporations are doing a tremendous business and deriving a large proportion of their incomes in fields separate and distinct from those in which they first entered the manufacturing field," states Mr. Wright. "General Motors Corporation, for example, earns only 50 per cent of its income from its motor car operations, but is engaged also in the manufacture of electric refrigerators, aircraft and aircraft parts, radio products, electrical equipment, etc. The degree to which diversification can be carried out depends largely on the type of industry in which a company is engaged."

Hugh Bancroft, president of Dow, Jones & Co., and publisher of the



HUGH BANCROFT

Wall Street Journal, Barron's Boston News Bureau and the Philadelphia Financial Journal, is to be a guest speaker at a date as yet unset in a series of investment talks over Station WEZ. Many well-known Boston financial authorities will be heard over the air during the season. The talks are to be sponsored by a Federal st. house, distributors of mutual investment trusts.

W. L. Stoddard in charge of the Boston office, says "The object of these radio talks is to emphasize sound investment principles. We are very fortunate in having the co-operation of many friends in Boston who have expressed their willingness to work with us in giving to the public what is really a very remarkable series of brief lectures on banking, investment trusts, investing, the stock market, and allied subjects."

Mrs. Brenda Briggs Adams, director of the personal service department of the Suffolk Savings Bank, Boston, explained the duties and experiences of the "How-do-you-do person" of a modern savings bank, at this morning's session of the Savings Banks Association of Massachusetts, which is holding its annual meeting at the Hotel Aspinwall, Lenox.

The idea of personal service, she explained, is the development of closer relations between the bank and its depositors through a clearer understanding, which may be served through a liaison representative of the interests of both.

She emphasized the importance of securing the confidence of the patrons, particularly those who are unfamiliar with the rudimentary practice of banking. To accomplish this, she points out, careful attention should be given to the location of the personal service director. It had been the experience in her institution that a desk easily accessible and somewhat apart from the activities of the floor has been worth while. Again, the spirit of the director naturally determines the degree of success that may be expected. A pleasant smile, she declared, will bring dividends in this work.

Personal service work, the speaker said, may be divided into three activities: general aid in the deposit and withdrawal of funds; assistance in household accounts and problems of families; and education with respect to Savings Bank Life Insurance.

Investment Trusts Given Special Study by Forbes

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—The most extraordinary financial development since the war, apart from the phenomenal rises in American stocks, has been the bewildering m u ltiplication in this country of investment trusts; a movement which only today at a faster pace than ever.

Almost as close to two billion dollars has been subscribed for such flotations this year and the total for 1929 promises to exceed two-and-a-half billions.

All other forms of enterprise combined have not marketed half so much stock this y.ar.

Why is this happening?

What will be the outcome?

B. C. Forbes

Life has become so complex that we try whenever possible to pass on responsibilities to others. President Coolidge certainly expressed with Democrats that the American people were casting upon Federal Government duties and obligations which should be handled either by individuals or by the states. The Government itself, to relieve congestion, resorted to transferring responsibilities to commissions and such like bodies.

The responsibility of running individual homes is being shirked on all sides. Housewives have flocked to apartment houses and to hotels, where domestic duties are taken over by others.

Reflect, and perhaps you will reach the conclusion that the hurry and scurry of modern existence and the desire to get rid of every avoidable responsibility explain very largely the amazing growth of investment trusts. We think we have so much to occupy our days that we have little time for anything.

Now, investing one savings, one's money, is a serious responsibility. It is a problem which many do not feel capable of solving efficiently. In the old days it was simpler because there then were relatively few bonds and investment stocks publicly dealt in. Just today that number is legion—on the New York Stock Exchange alone the value of issues bought and sold has increased more than fifty billion dollars in the last four years.

Moreover, the whole trend of life is towards speculation, towards "experts" on every conceivable phase of life.

Along comes the originators of investment trusts with the tidings: "Why spend sleepless days and then suffer sleepless nights over selecting investments for your funds? You may pick one or two or more securities which prove bad and half your money may be lost. The risk is too great.

"Let us, out of our abundant experience, solve your problem. Instead of buying for you a few securities, we will invest your funds in scores or even hundreds of well-chosen securities. We will give you a measure of diversity of holdings such as not even J. P. Morgan or Andrew W. Mellon could individually enjoy. Obviously, it is in your interest to put money into a capably managed investment trust, thus eliminating your risk to the smallest possible minimum by making you a part owner of a very large number of attractive enterprises."

Critics of investment trusts allege, among other things: "The motive underlying the forming of investment trusts is profit for those floating them. Many so-called investment trusts' are nothing but blind pools, bent in making a lot of money through gambling in stocks —with money put up by the public. Everything has been fine and everybody has been satisfied because the stock market has been going up and up. But when the market tumbles from its unprecedented heights, then those who bought investment trust shares will discover that they put their money into not a corporation investment but a rank speculation."

As in other divisions of the market irregularity has prevailed in investment trusts. Some, however, the advances easily exceeding the declines. These tables tell the tale:

What about oils?

Views of Wall Street

STEEL SKYROCKETS

Shorts were caught nice in Steel. They expected the fight money to bring a better concession, but had to turn over when good buying made temperance early. While the "Triple Threat" is succeeding with its recapitalization plans Steel is no stock to be short of.

UNITED GAS SUPPORT

Tinsters and some brokers advised getting out of utilities cheap because they had advanced. Profit taking in United Gas and others that resulted can be absorbed, as the powerful interests are not finished with mergers and concentration of operations.

ANACONDA RECOVERY

Short covering was responsible for the rally in Anaconda. Copper men are in dispute as to the metal price outlook and until they work together to hold the market there is going to be difficulty in getting a following to the copper stocks.

AMER. TEL. SPLIT UP

Despite denials, there is every reason to belief that American Telephone will be split up. Not for no other reason than to ease the technical corner in the stock, the directors should take such action.

STANDARD & COMPETITION

Standard Oil folks laugh at the tale of a huge combine by Morgan and foreign interests to compete in heavily taxing Standard's oil markets. The Morgan group floated the last two preferred stock issues floated by Standard companies.

MOTORS ACTION

General Motors action continues one of the keenest disappointments in the market. A big stock interest is being built up, however, and one of these days the bears may find themselves in the same hang that caught the Steel shorts.

RADIO EARNINGS

Radio stocks continue to tip [illegible] the "Leader during the Fall." They talk of progressive improvement in earnings over the next several months. Those who should know forecast net of "not more than $3 a share" this year.

UNITED CORP. HOLDINGS

The next published statement of United Corporation will show holdings and asset values exceeding the most optimistic expectations ,it is claimed. It has huge paper profit in several utilities and is adding to holdings in others.

ELECTRIC POWER DEAL

Electric Power met considerable profit-taking also. Controlling interests have not abandoned merger plans, however. Expectations exist that announcement may be made within the next fortnight.

COMBUSTION POOL RESUMES

Worcester Merger of Banks Planned

Directors of Worcester County National Bank of Worcester, the North Brookfield National Bank and the Second National Bank of Barre, are recommending for approval to their respective stockholders, a plan for consolidation or affiliation of the three banks. Stockholders will meet Oct. 19 to take action on the proposal.

Terms of the merger would be substantially as follows: Present capital of Worcester County National Bank represented by 30,000 shares of $50 par, would be increased to 72½ additional shares, these additional shares to be issued in the ratio of 4-5ths of a share for each North Brookfield share and 1¼ shares for each share of Second National stock.

Two new national banks would be names similar to Second National of Barre and the North Brookfield National Bank will be organized, each with paid-in capital and surplus of $50,000, which capital stock would be held by stockholders for the pro-rata benefit of all stockholders of Worcester County National Bank.

George M. Fink, president of the Great Lakes Company, will be president of the combined organization. G. Weir, president of the Weirton Company, will be chairman of the board, and George M. Humphrey of the Hanna Company will be chairman of the executive committee. Combined assets, it was said, probably would exceed $150,000,000. The new company will retain their identities and operating personnel.

TWO notable figures in the literary world, Christopher Morley and Joan Lowell, whose contributions have created a greater flurry during the past year than almost any other author, will appear before the microphone in a novelty sketch during the Fleischmann Sunshine Hour over WEEI and a coast-to-coast NBC network. Morley, erstwhile columnist, reached the peak of prominence in reviving melodrama that shocked theatergoers half a century ago. He changed Hoboken from a sailors' retreat to the "Seacoast of Bohemia." Joan Lowell sprang into sudden fame with the appearance of her novel of the sea, "The Cradle of the Deep."

Over a quarter of a million dollars, it is said, was paid by the followers of Gerald Chapman to secure that famous bandit's escape from the Athens, Ga., Hospital. An authentic and dramatic version of that episode in Chapman's career will be broadcast as the True Detective Mysteries offering at 9 o'clock through WNAC. Bill McKinnon, a local traffic officer, was a patient in a room adjoining that occupied by Chapman when the escape was made, and has written this inside story for the radio audience. McKinnon's version of the shower of wealth which deluged Athens to permit the supposedly dying bandit to walk unmolested to his freedom, will be given in full.

DR. EUGENE ORMANDY, conductor of the Jack Frost Melody Moments, broadcast each Thursday night from WEEI and the NBC network, is revealed as a composer. Oliver Smith will tonight sing Dr. Ormandy's composition, "Charming Episode." Only those who have known him for years realize how much sentiment rests beneath the fiery exterior he exposes to the outside world. Tonight's program is as follows:

Overture: Merry Wives of Windsor, Nicolai
Valencia. Arrangement by..... Ormandy
Orchestra
Pulcinello ..... Alatter
Ormandy arrangement for saxophones
Pagan Love Song ..... Brown
Charming Episode ..... Ormandy
Tenor solo, Oliver Smith.
L'Estudiantina Waltz ..... Waldteufel
Orchestra
Sugar Foot Strut ..... Pierce-Myers-Schwab
Special arrangement—vocal chorus
Carmen ..... Bizet
(a) Prelude.
(b) The Guard Mount.
(c) Flower song, sung by Oliver Smith.
(d) Gypsy Dance.
(e) Los Toreadors.

Charles F. Blaney's "Across the Pacific," a four-act drama of military life written during the war with Spain, and at the time Aquinaldo was causing trouble in the Philippines, will be presented by Hank Simmons' "Show Boat" company tonight from WNAC at 10:30 o'clock. Naturally enough, a play dealing with so serious a question as who should control the Philippines at the end of the war caused a flurry when produced, nor has the drama lost its liveliness today. An augmented cast insures a thrilling hour for the radio audience.

SANDY MacFARLANE and his Chimney Swallows offer another rollicking half hour of song and music through WBZ this evening. Sandy will lend his hearty laughter and the familiar burr of his voice to four Scotch folk songs, with the accompaniment of Charlie Frank's orchestra. In the characteristic voice and manner of a lovesick maid Sandy will sing "I'm Going to Marry 'Arry." Other numbers will be "Dixie Girls," "Kitty Lads," and "Bells, the Belle of Dunoon."

"TALKIE" URGE TO TRAVEL

Coincident with the showing this week of the sound picture, "Evangeline," at the State Theater, Mgr. Chipman of the City Ticket office, 13 Milk st., of the Eastern Steamship Lines, and Dominion Atlantic Railways, has arranged a novel and attractive window display. "Evangeline," a United Artists picture, starring Dolores Del Rio, is based on Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's poem. Many of the scenes depict the beauty of the Nova Scotia country.

It is expected that the showing of "Evangeline" throughout the country will arouse a desire for many people to plan to visit this quaint province. The Boston & Yarmouth S. S. Co. of the Eastern Steamship Lines operates the luxurious liner Yarmouth between Boston and Yarmouth on a three-round-trips-per-week fall schedule and the Dominion Atlantic Railway, which makes connection at Yarmouth with the steamer, covers every virtually every important point in Nova Scotia.

Hamburg-American Line Plans Tours

At the end of the winter cruising season, the Hamburg-American Line proposes to convert its steamers Resolute and Reliance into de luxe vessels offering only first-class accommodations, according to Emil Lederer, a member of the executive board of directors of the steamship company, in charge of passenger traffic, who returned from Europe on the motorship Milwaukee, Sept. 16. The Resolute is scheduled to make a special Christmas cruise to the West Indies before beginning her seventh world cruise on January 6, and the Reliance will make five pleasure private sightseeing tours to the West Indies beginning on December 17, and ending the middle of April.

The company plans to transform the second cabin accommodations on the Albert Ballin and Deutschland into tourist class, before the season because of the great demand for this class of accommodations by American travelers. However, in order to take care of the passengers who prefer to travel in the second cabin, these accommodations will be retained on the New York and Hamburg.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

A Gas Company 'Pledge'

Was It Made?

That was an interesting conference which took place on Tuesday in the rooms of the Public Utilities Commission at the State House on rates of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company.

Samuel Silverman, assistant corporation counsel for the City of Boston, referred to a proposed investigation of "dealings, contracts and other business relationships" between the Boston Gas Company, the New England Fuel & Transportation Company and the Eastern Gas and Fuel Associates.

Chairman Harry C. Attwill of the Commission questioned Robert H. Holt, of counsel for the gas company: "The Boston Consolidated Gas Company is owned by the Massachusetts Gas Companies?"

"Yes."

Mr. Silverman—"Who owns the Masssachusetts Gas Companies?"

"The Eastern Gas & Fuel Associates, I believe."

"And who owns them, Koppers?"

"I believe an interest associated with Koppers holds a large interest in the Eastern Gas & Fuel Associates," replied Mr. Holt.

Not that it is of great importance. Few of us care much where our "gas" money goes, or who gets it, if only rates are fair and service what it should be.

In the present instance there is NO complaint regarding service. The point is made by Mr. Silverman as the representative of Mayor Nichols and on behalf of the people, that the proposed new rates—so far as they represent an increase in price to the consumer—violate a PLEDGE, which President Barstow is said to have made, to the Legislative Committee on Light and Power in connection with the repeal of the sliding scale law.

The "pledge" referred to is a subject of controversy. The new rate schedule is to become effective October 1st. Meanwhile, we learn something about the ownership of the local gas organization and discover that our "gas" dollar travels some distance and does a lot of work.

'Playing the Market'

Silly, Weak and HAZARDOUS Business for Men in Positions of Trust

The lesson to be drawn from the plight of the Down East savings bank man who is locked in jail charged with appropriating $60,000, more or less, of the funds of the institution is an old one.

DON'T gamble!

The get-rich-quick spirit is in the very air. Men hear of this chap and that fellow who have "cleaned up in the market."

"Doe made $60,000 in ten days, in coppers. Roe $150,000 or was it $250,000?—in oils. THEIR wives have everything. They've got a new car, they've bought that place at the beach, next summer they are going to Europe."

It LOOKS easy. All you have to do—or so the poor lamb supposes—is buy a thousand shares of something, wait until it goes up twenty points and then collect your "earnings."

MOST unfortunately, stocks do not always go up. Occasionally, we read of a "break in the market." The Federal Reserve Board meets, or a statistician speaks words of warning. Stocks "go off." The little fellows are stripped of everything.

It is greatly to the credit of bank men that so few of them succumb. They must have been sorely tempted, this past year or two. The man in Maine was not a "spender." He "lived in a home such as befitted his position and the family entertained but little." The fact may be that he wanted to get rich and, hearing of the wonderful successes of stock market gamblers, decided he would be a chump if he did not "take a chance."

What do you suppose he would give, today, to be back where he was five minutes before he first listened to the Tempter?

He "played the other fellow's game." That, the professional gambler will tell you, is always the mark of the fool.

The 'New' Crook

Belongs to an Organization With Brains and Money, but CAN Be Crushed

The new crook and the newer crime, if they are to be put down or held in check, call for new methods on the part of the POLICE.

ONE way in which it should be done was shown on Tuesday, when the police of three states co-operated 100 per cent to arrest in Providence two men who broke jail at Manchester, N. H., on the night of September 6th.

One of the pair was a rum runner, tied up with one of the most successful mobs engaged in the business of running liquor out of Canada, through New Hampshire and into the cities of Southern New England.

The mob had provided the prisoner with all that was necessary to saw his way out of the Hillsborough County Jail. They hid him away in Providence. They were about to furnish him with the means of traveling further.

In a midnight raid at Milton, on Monday night, members of the Massachusetts State constabulary, seizing liquor valued at $8000, learned that a "notorious" rum-runner was about to leave Providence with funds for one John Dineen, alias Joseph McCarthy, one of the jail breakers.

Our State police notified Sheriff Richard O'Dowd at Manchester, met him with a motorcycle cavalcade, and accompanied him to Providence, where at 5 o'clock in the morning Lieutenant Murray, of the Sessions Street Station, detailed a squad of patrolmen to go with them to the house at No. 14 Sargent Avenue. Dineen, alias McCarthy, was found in bed with one Henry Downey, the other fugitive. At 6:30 a. m., the New Hampshire sheriff was on the way home with them.

This is the sort of police performance which gives the law-abiding citizen to hope that one of these days the forces of right may catch up with the forces of evil.

The rum runner and his kind long have been making use of the automobile and the gun. The police must have fast cars to keep up with them. More, they need the printing-telegraph, the radio, swift use of the telephone, and such a fine spirit of all-for-one-and-one-for-all as was shown on Tuesday by Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island.

It will be a bad day for the professional crook when the police organizations of New England begin to act as ONE.

Will They Ever Let Him Grow Up?

'A Slave Is Not a Man'

So Said the Roman Empress, in Her Bath

(Copyright, 1929)

A CHINESE "FOOT-BEAUTY" EXPERT.

Beauty may be "only skin deep," but in these days there are considerable areas of surface to be made beautiful.

This lady of fashion has a Caucasian expert working to make her hair wavy, while an expert of the Mongolian race, a Chinese, looks after her feet, takes care of the toenails, cuts them nicely, polishes them.

What lovely woman does not display in these days is hardly worth mentioning, and it isn't much.

You may ask, "Why a Chinese expert on foot-beauty?"

We can only offer a guess.

It is rather a delicate thing for a lady, even a "modern" woman, to allow a man to handle her feet. But the KIND of man may make a difference.

An ancient Roman Empress, taking her bath, had male slaves walking about the bathroom. Rebuked, she replied, "A SLAVE is not a MAN."

She was mistaken, but that didn't change anything. Possibly this lady in the picture finds a difference between the Mongolian expert and a man of her own kind.

When this lady trots down the sand to the ocean in her bare feet or sits sipping her cocktail, with one bare leg crossed over the other bare leg, it comforts her considerably to know that the finest ruby from Burmah shines no more brightly than her polished toenails.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

When an irresistible force meets an immovable apparatus the net proceeds are mergers.

Big business has swallowed up its midget competition. Big business is now engaged in the personal cannibalistic pastime of eating itself up from all angles.

We are very important between hemispheres.

Probably the merger that will twitch your imagination is that between the Standard Oil and laughing frankfurters.

The John Dees noticed that every time a tourist stopped at a pump for gasoline, he had a mustache made of mustard and was chewing courageously at a fricaseed and barbecued hot dog.

The backseat drivers were also chinning themselves on horizontal bars made of hamburgered spaniels.

So the John Dees decided to capture the frankfurter trade and merge it with the gas stations.

They have not yet selected a slogan for this merger.

And, in place of mustard, you will be able to spread non-freezing grease on your rolls.

Looks like big business has gone to the hot dogs.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

DWELLERS in far places, traders on lonely shores, always have to fight hard against "going native." With the edge of adventure dulled, with none but inferiors around him, it is fatally easy for the white man to drift into that who-cares attitude—lose his grip on the niceties and standards of civilized life—get sloppy, mentally and physically—let go. But if he dies, he's cooked.

Robert Service told the story once in the wail of a marooned

"I will not wash my face,
I will not brush my hair,
I 'pig' around the place,
There's nobody to care.
I feel as if I was
The only living thing
On all this blighted earth;
And so I frowst and shrink
And, crouching by my hearth,
I hear the thoughts I think."

Going native—that's the dread and the shame of the discouraged white man in foreign ports. But you don't need to live in foreign ports to go native. You can go native right in your own kitchen. You can let yourself go until you become as listless, as lacking in ambition, as the machines about you.

You've seen people who have. Women who were dainty, sparkling girls before marriage, careful of their looks, keen to adopt the "latest line"—five years after their marriage they're as dull and draggled as their dust mops.

Or men who were live wires as youngsters, well groomed, alert, stepping right along with the procession. Then came success—or discouragement—and they lost their grip. Stopped pressing their pants—stopped sparkling ideas—went native.

Nine-tenths of our big fight in life is just that—to keep from going native. To keep the fuzz off our brains as well as off our chins.

Did you read about the Jackson and O'Brine endurance flight? Over 400 hours in the air! Here's a news note—

"Jackson and O'Brien attributed some of their good spirits to the adherence to the rule not to 'turn native' in the air. Water was lowered to them in cans from the refueling plane each day and they took sponge baths and always presented shaven faces to their 'call-sign.'"

With every excuse for taking things easy, Jackson and O'Brine fought the temptation to slack. Their characters stood the endurance tests as valiantly as their motor.

Here's another story that has come down through history—one of those stories that MAKE history. During one of his expeditions into the then trackless West, Col. John Charles Fremont was lost, with his men, in the Sierra Nevada mountains. They were beset by every conceivable peril that could wreck a man's morale . . . sickness, storms, savage tribes . . . and starvation. For days they knew the nausea of empty stomachs, the growing delirium of reeling heads. They ate their horses. Then, with their bare feet leaving bloody tracks upon the snow, they gathered in a staggering circle and, raising their hands to God, solemnly vowed not to eat each other. To such a dreadful pass had they come! And yet—

THOUGH NO FOOD PASSED HIS LIPS FOR DAYS, COL. FREMONT USED HIS TOOTHBRUSH REGULARLY. USED HIS TOOTHBRUSH AND SAID HIS PRAYERS FOR HE BELIEVED THAT BY SO DOING HE COULD HOLD HIS SPIRIT STEADFAST IN THE MIDST OF CONFUSION.

That temptation to let go—you've felt it thousands of times—perhaps you're feeling it now. Of all temptations it is most common and most subtle. It's fairly easy to face Big Trouble. Most of us can make a good showing if the guns bang loud enough. But in the slack times of life, WHEN THERE'S NOTHING TO FIGHT BUT OURSELVES OUR SPIRITS TURN TO CHUNKS OF COLD TALLOW.

There's only one thing that can pull us out of a slump like that. Strangely enough, no thought of loved ones, home, ambition, honor or gain seems strong enough to stir us from that disgusted apathy. But there is one thing that will sting us into action—if there's a spark of decency left in us . . . one thing that will make us wash our ears and file our records . . . AND THAT'S THE FEELING THAT WE'RE MADE OF MAN STUFF. THAT WE MUST NOT BREAK FAITH WITH OUR KIND—THE SPIRIT OF CARRY ON!

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

The greatest thoughts are the simplest; and so are the greatest men.
—Hare

The muse does not allow the praise-deserving hero to die; she enthrones him in the heavens.
—Horace.

Anyone who hopes to achieve success may find comfort in the knowledge that the average man is not very successful.

Many men have been capable of doing a wise thing, more a cunning thing. But very few a generous thing.

Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

WHAT you give is but a dole
If you give it not with love;
All earth over, pole to pole,
Love is heart and love is soul
Of all gifts that welcome prove

Emerald, ruby, pearl or jade,
Orchid, jasmine, lily, rose,
Fairest gift man ever made
Still has poverty betrayed
If no true love with it goes.

What you give is gold or dross
Only as love makes it so;
Diamonds are an alms you toss
Sapphires' splendor is but loss,
Lacking love's transcendent glow

Or dark pansies gemmed with dew,
Rare are they as glories shed
When dawn glimmers overhead

New York Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

NEW YORK Sept. 19—The new glitter of the famous old Casino in Central Park has stirred up a political hornet nest and threatens to be a tormenting issue in Mayor Walker's campaign. When the inn opened several months ago it thumbed a figurative nose at the peasantry and invoked the thunder of tabloids.

The Casino has been drifting along with but fair success for years. It had the geographical and al fresco advantages of a Pre Catelan of Armenonville cafe in the Paris Bois but failed to click. Several years ago it was taken over by C. F. Zittel, known better as "Zit," a vaudeville commentator.

The building is owned by the city and operated by leasehold. Zit was reported to be making some progress when Mayor Walker's park commissioner suddenly gave the cafe privileges to a swanky set headed by A. J. Drexel Biddle, social scion of the family inspiring the visiting Englishman's query: "What is a Biddle?"

Zit filed a suit or so but the aristocrats won. And they called in Joseph Urban, wizard of decorators, handed him $500,000 and Mr. Urban shot the works. Few cafes touch it for scenic magnificence. Two orchestras are on tap and boys with round hair cuts are parked behind palms.

Presiding over its roped portals is Rene Black, who as Rene is a carpet kissing favorite in the upper circles in New York, California and Florida. According to the promoters the new Casino is to be a spot "around which the cultured life of the city can rotate." For a consideration, of course!

Those who are pouting at the elegantly sartorial mayor are, for no exciting reasons referring to it as his modern Versailles where he will withdraw from the rigors of City Hall to hold court in state from time to time. It is but fair to chronicle there is no record of the mayor dining there so far.

Yet tales of class distinction on city owned property has stirred the humble burghers. They see no reason why it should provide a background for the noble feasts of millionaires while the proletariat picnics among the gnats on the surrounding lawn.

Another picturesque municipally owned cafe is The Claremont, hitherto celebrated for the birthplace it disclaims. Here's caught a waiter, Theodosia, who vanished at sea. It is a white frame building with glass enclosed porches and occupies a rise along the upper stretch of Riverside Drive. It is famous for Sunday morning breakfasts and afternoon teas. There are sweeps of surrounding greensward and an entrancing view of the rippling Hudson against the purplish cowl of the Jersey palisades. Another city owned cafe building in Hunter Island Inn, near Pelham in Westchester.

There's a dirty dig somewhere for safety razor manufacturers in the fact there is a prosperous concern in the metropolis still decorating shaving mugs for barber shops.

The expected drop in hotel prices this summer did not jell. There were the usual "summer rates" but nothing significant and prices, so reduced, will return to last winter's rates this Fall. Many large hotels are only half filled but all are hopeful and bang on to the high tariff.

A Broadway actor and his wife, whose mutual show of affection in public was one of the theater's domestic classics, are now glaring at each other in a divorce court. He claims the minute she gets him alone he is on the receiving end of a sound smacking.

Montague Glass used to regale dinner parties with the tale of the amiable stew who wound up at the Lambs shortly after midnight. Everybody had gone to bed save a couple of gravely silent and deadpanned acrobats in checked clothes and gray derbies. He insisted they accompany him to his home at Great Neck for a little snack which his wife would be glad to prepare. He stressed her good humor over being aroused at all hours. When the three arrived, a scowling face appeared at the head of the stairs. Then the lady let go in vases, one catching the stay-out flush on the head and spinning him for two somersaults. As he sat up he chirped to the acrobats: "Join little Eva, please, always slowing down."
